TANKCAR SMASHUP forced evacuation of two farm families near Lacombe, Alta., today after gas fumes from one of the ruptured cars exploded sending a ball of fire into the air. The 33 wrecked cars were all empty butane or propane carriers being taken to be washed out. Authorities fear further explosions and are testing for other leaks. Nobody was hurt in the smash.

Technical Problem Mars Smooth Start for Apollo

Times News Services

HOUSTON — Apollo 15 ran into technical problems today shortly after the smoothest countdown and moonward blastoff in the Apollo series.

Space engineers here are studying the apparent abnormality of a valve in the service propulsion system, but said there is no danger of spontaneous combustion of the fuel.

Shortly after leaving earth orbit at 9:24 (PDT) for the long journey to the moon, Apollo 15's automatic signals and readings from the three-man crew indicated that the valve is "in an unusual position."

The explorers are to conduct man's first driving expedition on the surface, a quest among towering mountains and along the side of a deep canyon.

Col. David R. Scott, Lt.-Col.

James B. Irwin and Maj.

Alfred M. Worden, all United States Air Forces officers, broke away from the embrace of earth's gravity as a jarring rocket blast sent them out of orbit and sent them winging toward their distant target and one of history's greatest scientific explorations.

For nearly three hours, the astronauts had circled the globe in the command ship Endeavour, checking the craft's hundreds of systems before committing themselves to the three-day outward voyage. Then they re-ignited the third stage of their Saturn V rocket and their speed accelerated to about 24,300 miles an hour from 17,400.

The Saturn V propelled them away from their home planet right on time at 6:34 a.m., as an estimated one million persons watched in the Cape Kennedy area.

"Good job," Scott told the launch crew. "It was a very smooth ride all the way."

ALL STAGES FIRE

All three stages of the Saturn V fired precisely on schedule and propelled the spacemen riding in the command ship Endeavour into earth orbit more than 100 miles high.

Half an hour after leaving earth orbit for the moon, the astronauts separated Endeavour, pivoted around 180 degrees and gingerly poked a harpoon-like docking device into a connecting mechanism landing ship Falcon, cradled atop the third stage.

"We have hard dock," Worden reported.

The docking exercise, relayed live on television by the astronauts, went smoothly, in contrast to the Apollo 14 flight last January, when the astronauts made five unsuccessful attempts before finally linking up on the sixth try. The reason for the problem has never been found, but experts believe a tiny substance might have temporarily jammed the apparatus.

MARTIN BORMANN 'ALIVE BUT ILL'

BOSTON (UPI) — Martin Bormann, deputy führer under Adolf Hitler in Nazi Germany, is alive but in ill health on a ranch in South America, the Boston Globe said today.

Bormann, who fled Allied investigators at the end of the Second World War, lives on the Paraguayan-Argentine border, on a ranch called "Walldau 555." Bormann's SS number, according to a Globe interview with a former Israeli spy.

Zvi Aldouby, a former operative for "Mosad," an Israeli intelligence agency, said Bormann bought a Chilean estate after the war and then moved to Paraguay "where there are 14 colonies of emigres, and some 50,000 Nazis, ex-Nazis and Nazi sympathizers on the Argentine border."

B.C. Ferry Crews Take Strike Vote

Strike ballots were to be distributed today among crews of B.C. Ferries in a dispute over sick leave.

Norman Thorner, business agent for the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees Union, said results are expected by Thursday night or Friday morning.

He discounted an earlier report that a strike is imminent, saying "most likely" is a better description.

Thorner said strike action is being considered—unless

CAN'T GET SICK

He said the regulations, issued April 17, are contrary to general procedures for the civil service. The April regulations lump absenteeism of all kinds, including leaves of absence and days off without pay, in with sick leave.

Two hundred of the union's 1,600 members have been sent letters saying they could be fired if they are absent in the next six months, he said.

What this means is that they can't get sick any time in the next six months."

He also said the employees are unhappy with management's refusal to acknowledge doctors' letters when employees are absent more than six days.

The only strike in the past against B.C. Ferries occurred in February, 1968, and lasted 13 days. The dispute was mainly over the layoff of 160 employees, job security and lack of meaningful seniority.

Ferries manager Monty Aldous was called twice by the Times this morning and did not respond to messages left.

SASKATCHEWAN GRITS TO NAME NEW LEADER

REGINA (CP)—The Saskatchewan Liberal caucus plans to meet tonight following the funeral of leader W. Ross Thatcher, who died Friday.

Liberal spokesman said the caucus would appoint an interim leader, probably deputy leader Dave Stewart, and would make plans for the special session of the legislature which starts Wednesday.

Closure Of Woods Imminent

2,000
Laid Off

A HOT DAY IN JULY

More than 2,000 Vancouver Island loggers have been idled by a week of warm, sunny weather that has baked B.C. woods almost to the point of closure.

It is the worst forest industry situation since last July when 1,500 loggers were out because of fires that cost a record $19 million.

The fire hazard situation is "building up seriously," said B.C. Forest Service, which makes a daily assessment and is considering hourly review of conditions as the threat of fire mounts.

There has been no campfire ban to date, nor restrictions imposed on woods operations, recreational use of the forest or travel through company-maintained lands.

All shutdowns so far have been at the discretion of logging operators concerned for their security in line with insurance requirements.

WEST COAST

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., the largest operator, has laid off about 1,100 men in camps from Shawinigan Lake to Kelsey Bay. The balance are scattered from Sooke to the west coast and north to Courtenay.

In many of the operating camps loggers are on early shifts to keep them out of the woods in peak hazard period between late morning and dusk.

The forest service said operators who have chosen to close have the right to restrict the public until the situation abates.

FIRE HAZARD

Besides men laid off because of fire hazard, some are taking annual vacations, such as the 330 at Caycuse and Port Renfrew operations of B.C. Forest Products Ltd.

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. has sent home about 650 men from its Courtenay

Heart, Lungs Used Without Consent

Times News Services

CAPE TOWN, South Africa—The widow of a 28-year-old black man whose heart and lungs were transplanted by Dr. Christiaan Barnard into a 49-year-old dental technician Sunday, said she was not informed of the transplant and if she had been, would have refused permission for it.

Rosalie Gunya, wife of Jackson Gunya, who reportedly died of injuries received in a fight, said "I would never have given permission for such a thing if I had known."

The transplant recipient, Adrian Herbert, a colored (the official designation is South Africa for mulattoes) Cape Town resident, was today reported to be in satisfactory condition with the new organs functioning.

Gunya was found unconscious with head injuries near his home early Saturday and was taken to Rondebosch Cottage Hospital.

Informed sources said members of the heart-transplant team saw him there and asked that he be transferred to Groote Schuur Hospital, where they work. He died there later that day.

Mrs. Gunya said she went to Rondebosch Hospital Saturday morning and was told her husband had been transferred to Groote Schuur.

"At Groote Schuur they said they didn't know anything about my husband," Mrs. Gunya said.

"I insisted he was there and after some time they took me to see him. He looked fine to me. He was being given blood, but there was no doctor in attendance. I left the hospital convinced he would be better soon."

The operation was Barnard's first combined heart-lung transplant, and the world's fourth. The previous ones were done in the States. All the patients died.

The most critical period is the two weeks after the graft when the patient's resistance to infection is low and when the transplanted lungs tend to fill with fluid.

A hospital spokesman said Gunya's relatives could not be located before the operation.

Barnard and his team performed the six-hour operation after doing extensive research and experiments with animals. Herbert, bedridden two years with an incurable lung condition that weakened his heart, underwent extensive tests for four weeks before the surgery.

Nevertheless, Barnard said after the operation:

"We haven't had any experience with this type of operation clinically, and we'll just have to watch the results very closely."

sulphur dioxide combine with water vapor and fall to the earth as a form of sulphuric acid."

They said one of the lakes most polluted is O.S.A. Lake in Killarney provincial park, named after the Ontario Society of Artists. The area was sketchily analyzed by several members of The Group of Seven, including Frank Carmichael, A. Y. Jackson, Arthur Lismer and A. J. Casson.

DESTROYS ECOSYSTEM

"During the past few years, lake trout and other fish have disappeared suddenly from several lakes such as Lumsden and O.S.A.," say the two zoologists in an article in The Globe and Mail.

They say the waters of O.S.A. Lake "are so acid as to be lethal to most species of fish."

The acid in the snow enters the lakes in the spring and they say eventually, the concentration of acid exceeds that which some of the organisms in the lake can tolerate, and the ecosystem is destroyed." The two scientists say industry is at fault.

"Industry commonly gets rid of its wastes by building high emission stacks which spread the fallout over a greater area."

"Unfortunately, this tactic has served to carry the acid pollution into an area where the lakes are not capable chemically of neutralizing the pollutant."

R.R. Saddington, assistant to the division manager of the International Nickel Co., the largest base-metal operation in Sudbury, says "the tallest chimney" in the world" being built at the company's Copper Cliff plant "is a case of making full use of a proven method of dispersing sulphur dioxide-bearing smelter gases so that it will be rendered harmless."

Writing in the same issue of The Globe and Mail, he says the stack is the best answer to pollution "within the limits of today's technology."

"At the same time, we are continuing a program of intensive research to develop a method of processing our ores that will not involve the generation of sulphur dioxide."

ROCK PERFORMERS Harry Creech and Kahlen Wood (above) of local group Morning Star entertain crowds of young people (below) at free concert at Willows Park Sunday. Half a dozen groups performed at the concert, sponsored by Dennis Scherk.

Crowd numbers were estimated at 2,000 at various points of the five-hour performance. An added attraction was the chance to pick up a good tan, as many spectators stretched out for the sun's rays. (Robin Clarke photos.)

Apollo 15: Day by Day

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The day-by-day highlights of the 12-day Apollo 15 mission to the moon:

Monday, July 26

Astronauts David R. Scott, James B. Irwin and Alfred M. Worden ride a Saturn V rocket into space at 9:34 a.m. EDT. After orbiting earth nearly three hours, they re-fire the third-stage engine at 12:30 p.m. to head for the moon, 250,000 miles away. At 12:54 p.m., command ship Endeavour separates, turns around and docks nose-to-nose with the lunar ship. Falcon pulls it from its compartment atop the third stage.

Tues., July 27-Thurs., July 29

Apollo 15 coasts toward the moon, with astronauts monitoring systems, making necessary course corrections and beaming occasional television report to earth. At 4:07 p.m. July 29, they fire into moon orbit.

Saturday, July 31

Scott and Irwin make their first of three descents to the surface at 9:24 a.m. They unstow their four-wheel moon car called Rover 1 and drive about 2.5 miles to Elbow Crater on the rim of Hadley Rille. They collect rock and soil samples and photograph the 1,200-foot-deep canyon. They drive a short distance to the base of the mountains in a search for original lunar crust. At each stop, a television camera on Rover relays their activities to earth. They return to Falcon after driving a total of about 5.6 miles. While Irwin deploys a nuclear-powered science station, Scott drills three 10-foot-deep holes. In two he places temperature sensors and from the other he collects deep-down soil samples. After seven hours outside, they climb back inside the lander to rest.

Sunday, Aug. 1

Moonean starts second seven-hour excursion at 6:46 a.m., driving nearly five miles to another area of the mountain front stopping en route to sample a group of impact craters. They range along the front looking for crust material that might date back to the origin of the moon. En route back to the lander, they conduct soil mechanics tests in a flat plain called the Marsh of Decay.

Monday, Aug. 2

Scott and Irwin start early, at 3:24 a.m., on their third excursion, a six-hour drive to several spots along the Hadley Rille and then about 2.5 miles north to a region known as the North Complex to investigate group of craters which may have been formed by volcanoes. They again sample the Marsh of Decay en route back to Falcon. They climb back in for the final time after a total of 20 hours outside and about 22 miles driving during the three explorations. The Rover 1 television camera televisions live to earth the liftoff of the landing vehicle at 1:09 p.m. After a chase of nearly two hours, Falcon catches and links up with Worden in the command ship Endeavour at 3:04 p.m.

Tues., Aug. 3-Wed., Aug. 4

Astronauts spend two additional days in lunar orbit conducting scientific and photographic experiments, mapping nearly 20 per cent of the moon's surface. At 4:10 p.m. Aug. 4, Worden ejects a 78.5-pound scientific satellite from the equipment bay at the rear of the spacecraft. Satellite is Manuel Pacheco, who said he was from Massachusetts, was charged Saturday with eight counts of false pretenses and another of possession of stolen property, over $50.

Judge Edmond St. Jorre remanded the man to Friday in custody.

Two of the charges involved monkeys.

Police Wednesday staked out a Johnson Street pet store hoping to speak to a man about some cheques passed in the city. Police learned a man was going to the store to discuss the purchase of a monkey with the shopkeeper.

The man arrived but fled in a car at high speed spinning a city detective around who had his arm in the vehicle.

The man ran from the car a short time later and the vehicle rolled into a parked car.

A Rock-Only Rock Festival After Grant Appeal Fails

Failure to obtain grants from two local groups has forced organizers of a 12-hour rock festival next Saturday to cancel an appearance of the Victoria Chamber Orchestra at the event.

The concert is being sponsored by a group of five students who say they want to do something for Victoria musically and decided a rock festival was the best way to raise money for deserving organizations.

The University of Victoria Alma Mater Society is co-sponsoring the event.

To enable the chamber group to appear, organizers had hoped to receive grants from the Victoria centennial Committee and the local musicians' union.

A festival spokesman said neither group felt it could give the concert financial support. Cost of the chamber group would have been $475.

The Centennial Committee agreed, however, to underwrite the concert's sponsors in lieu of an outright grant.

The spokesman said festival organizers were greatly disappointed to not retain the Chamber Orchestra, as its appearance was hoped to attract a number of older people to the concert, and also to expose younger people to classical music.

"This is a festival for people," one organizer said. "Not a festival just for 'young people,' turned-on people, or whatever, but simply a festival for people, and that means all people — no matter what their age or lifestyle — are welcome."

The concert is being held at the University of Victoria gymnasium and gets underway at 12 noon Saturday.

Organizers say that although the concert is 12 hours in length, people will be able to come and go at will. After initial entry, hands will be stamped with ink so people can leave when they want and return later.

The concert is entirely a benefit affair, with proceeds being split among several local organizations.

Cool-Aid, NEED — the local crisis telephone service, the Native Friendship Centre, Food Co-op and Operation Recycle are to be the recipients of proceeds.

The concert features 12 hours of music, climaxing by the performance of Brahman, a seven-man rock band from Vancouver, hailed by many as the latest supergroup on the west coast.

Other performers include Canadian folk artist Tom Northcott; Mother's Pride — a country duo from Santa Barbara, Calif.; Solid Comfort — a top Vancouver blues band; and four of the top Victoria rock groups.

The concert is entirely a

'BEAUTY ISN'T ENOUGH'

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — "Beauty isn't enough for a woman," says shapely Miss Universe 1971.

"If you lack intelligence and charm, you're a loser," says Georgina Rizk of Lebanon who recounted experiences Sunday that led to her crowning as successor to Puerto Rico's Marisol Malaret.

"Even an ugly woman, if feminine and gracious, can be most interesting to a man... more interesting than a beautiful girl who lacks soul."

Miss Rizk, draped in a Kappa dancing-girl costume, won the judges votes Saturday night with her 35-24-35 figure.

Georgina has been a model since age 14. Her dream is to become a world-famous cover girl.

"I have a boy-friend, Philippe Duce, back in Beirut," she said.

He may not be so happy since I will be away for most of the next year. Yes, he's a little bit jealous."

Her rewards as Miss Universe include $10,000 in cash and a $5,000 mink coat.

Back-Bencher Must Walk Thin Line

By DAVE MCINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Political life for a government back-bencher can be pretty frustrating.

Phil Givens, Liberal MP for York West, said as much when he announced he will quit the federal field and run in the next Ontario general election.

The big drawback is that the government back-bencher must be cautious in his criticism of government policy and actions or his chances of promotion to parliamentary secretary and the cabinet will shrink.

This perforce leaves all or most of the criticism to the opposition MP, though the government member may privately agree with it, especially when he knows his constituents do.

In the parliamentary form of government, a high value is still set on party loyalty. By and large, the MP—and this applies to the opposition as well as the government member—must confine his criticism of the party to the privacy of the weekly caucus meetings.

SEEKING SOLUTION

The Trudeau cabinet has been trying to find some way around this problem.

The object would be to allow the government back-bencher to disagree with the administration publicly without being sent to political Coventry or forced out of the ruling party altogether.

Liberal party sources say it would be simple enough for the cabinet to declare that Liberal back-benchers can disagree in public with the government.

But from such a declaration would flow automatically the result that Liberal MPs would be allowed to vote as they pleased in the Commons.

In other words, a free vote on every piece of legislation and opposition motion of non-confidence.

Except on so-called matters of conscience, such as abolition of the death penalty for murder, no government has been able to face such a prospect.

DRAWBACKS NOTED

It could result in the formation of independent groups within political parties and in the end so splinter the Commons that it would be impossible for any administration to face such a prospect.

MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL in the world is the title won Saturday night by Georgina Rizk, of Beirut, Lebanon, who holds high her Miss Universe banner at Miami Beach. She is 18 years old, 5 foot, seven inches and weighs 121 pounds. (AP Wirephoto)

Peking Set to Fight or Talk—Tourists

By ERNESTO MENDOZA

HONG KONG (Reuter) — A spokesman for 26 Canadians who toured China for a month said today they saw many air raid shelters and troops and were told that the Chinese are prepared to negotiate or fight whenever the United States wanted.

The group leader, lawyer Ken Woodsorth, told reporters that armed People's Liberation Army units were in evidence everywhere, many more than he saw on his last visit to China in 1965.

Even new subway in Peking is apparently designed for use as an air raid shelter. "We were told that China is prepared to negotiate and prepared to fight—wherever the Americans wanted," he said.

However, he said he found less anti-Americanism than on his previous trip.

Woodsorth said Peking's invitation to President Nixon to visit China was accepted by the people as government policy. He himself was not surprised by the news because he had expected that the United States resolved with leftists and conservatives acquiring an equal share of power.

The group, whose tour was organized by the University of British Columbia, included teachers, lawyers, an electrical engineer, and a doctor.

Woodsorth predicted China would not open its doors to tourists in the foreseeable future. "We were told that they are not interested in the tourist—it is a sign of confidence trade but in government exchanges, and visits by individuals like journalists and by friendly delegations," he said.

"They want an intelligent change. They don't want lot of tourists swarming all over the country with cameras."

Woodsorth said the cultural revolution which plunged China into turmoil from 1966 to 1969 remained on in China and two others returned home earlier.

Woodsworth said the Chinese leaders, but had discussions with officials of many universities and other institutions.

Most of the group plan to return to Canada Tuesday.

MAO CONFIDANT MAY FALL

China Purging Extremists

By ROLAND DALLAS

HONG KONG (Reuter) — China is conducting a purge of extreme leftists which could involve politburo member Chen Po-ta, usually reliable sources said here today.

Chen, a former aide of party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, was one of the spearheads of the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution that threw China into turmoil between 1967 and 1969.

The purge was against members of the May 16 Group, which took a leading role in the revolutionary disorders, the sources said.

Yao Teng-shan, who seized control of the Peking foreign ministry for 13 days at the height of the disorders, already has been punished, reliable reports say.

Six other men, in top positions, have recently been identified here in an article in the Far Eastern Economic Review which was not controlled. Chen and was apparently a warning to Chiang Ching, Chiang Mao's leftist elements against any rep-

Chinese capital during the revolution and arrived in Hong Kong last month.

Purges were reliably reported to be under way in

Hainan, Fukien and Kwangtung provinces, and big character

posters have been put up in Canton denouncing "sham

Marxist-Leninists," the sources said.

Chen Po-ta, who served for years as Mao's personal confidant and secretary, and is a reaffirming the country's reputation for stability and on punishment those responsible for the disorders.

Chen was believed to be undergoing self-criticism sessions gized to Britain for the burning of Peking over his role in the British mission.

Arguments in Peking are being held up as the ring-thought to centre on how the leaders of the excesses, and disorders erupted and why they punishment for their crimes were not controlled. Chen and was apparently a warning to

Chiang Ching, Chiang Mao's leftist elements against any rep-

Chinese capital during the revolution and arrived in Hong Kong last month.

Now the pragmatic Chinese are at least of failing to re-

MONORAIL CRASH IN SEATTLE

SEATTLE (AP) — Twenty-seven persons were injured Sunday when a train on Seattle's monorail line—constructed to carry passengers from downtown to the city's 1962 world fair site—slammed into a steel girder.

The accident occurred at the monorail terminal at the Seattle Centre, a system of exhibits, shops and amusements which now occupies the fair site.

Most of the injured suffered facial lacerations or fractures, hospital officials reported.

Jess Dawson, a spokesman of the Seattle Transit Co., which operates the monorail, said the elevated train is capable of operating at speeds of up to 40 miles an hour, but it "certainly wasn't going that fast when it hit."

Dawson said the cause of the crash has not been determined.

Is This Satisfactory?

FOR THE LAST FIVE DAYS AIR Canada has been flying without interruptions due to labor disputes. The package deal, including compromises declared acceptable by the union and generous by the airline, has lifted the worry caused by rotating strikes that imposed serious concern on many prospective passengers. As late union votes come in, operations appear to have returned to normal — a situation that seems satisfactory to the rotating strikers and the management.

But how satisfied is the public? Or how satisfied should it be?

Canadians have been told that the union which went on strike had been without a contract for over six months. Then, in less than three days of intensive negotiation — after the public had been used as a lever — settlement was reached. What kind of sense does this make?

The explanation is given that certain preliminaries have to be conducted, that negotiation is complicated and forms have to be followed. Why could they not have been carried out before the end of the contract? Settlement has been reached only after disruption of service with the innocent, fare-paying and airlines-supporting ordinary citizen pushed into the conflict through no wish or fault of his own.

If members of the public are angered by such treatment, they have every right to be. The difference was not of their making, the factors involved in the eventual settlement were not of their devising. They were the victims — and incidentally, they will pay the higher costs of the settlement, whether they want to or not.

The cost factor is important, of course, and may be one of the reasons why airlines' projections of increased traffic and higher revenues proved so inaccurate that many on this continent operated in the red last year. The forces of the market, no doubt, will bring about readjustments there. But the forces of the market do not apply to this practice of using the public as a club in the conflict between the opposing interests in the dispute. Employing such a device is inexcusable.

Labor must have a means of backing its legitimate demands for improved working conditions and adequate returns. Management must also be equipped to meet confrontations. But as the postal strike so recently demonstrated and as the rotating book-offs in various airports last week emphasized, the calculated use of the ordinary citizen, wanting only the service for which he pays, cannot go on forever.

Six months in which to reach a settlement, then disruption before the problem is met in three days of intensive work! This is efficient public service? It may sound old-fashioned, but prevention is still the best cure — and that prevention is surely feasible before the public is bludgeoned.

People in Glass Houses

SMALL CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS are encountering greater difficulties exporting their goods to the United States. It is not certain, however, whether the U.S. Customs Bureau is simply applying legitimate shipping requirements or a deliberate protectionist policy exists. Canada is extremely sensitive to any changes in U.S. importing regulations since we are so dependent on exports to American markets.

There are large areas in which non-tariff barriers can be applied to incoming goods at the discretion of government and which require no legislation. The protectionist trend in the U.S., about which so much has been heard, may be slowly gathering steam. It is expected that another attempt will be made in Congress this year to pass a restrictive trade bill.

Before turning inwards in self-pity it would be well to remember that Canadian commercial policy can be just as discriminatory. We have our own axes to grind — or, more specifically, certain well-placed industries have enough political pull to bring about tariff discrimination. It is not easy to be objective when the shoe is on the other foot in this potentially embarrassing and even painful situation. Both countries should keep in mind that we are one another's best customer.

The Deer Are Less Dangerous

CONSERVATION OFFICER Jack Lenfest makes a valid point — as far as it goes — when he says that if Saanich Peninsula deer are allowed to multiply by being protected from hunters, they will increase as a nuisance to gardeners and farmers whose crops they will damage.

The argument falls short, however, when the area concerned is considered. There is still a substantial amount of wild land on the peninsula. It is, nevertheless, located close to town and could be expected to attract a mounting army of hunters if present restrictions were relaxed. The number of those going into the woods would, in itself, create a hazard both for the hunters and for occupants of property, formerly wilderness, which is now being settled.

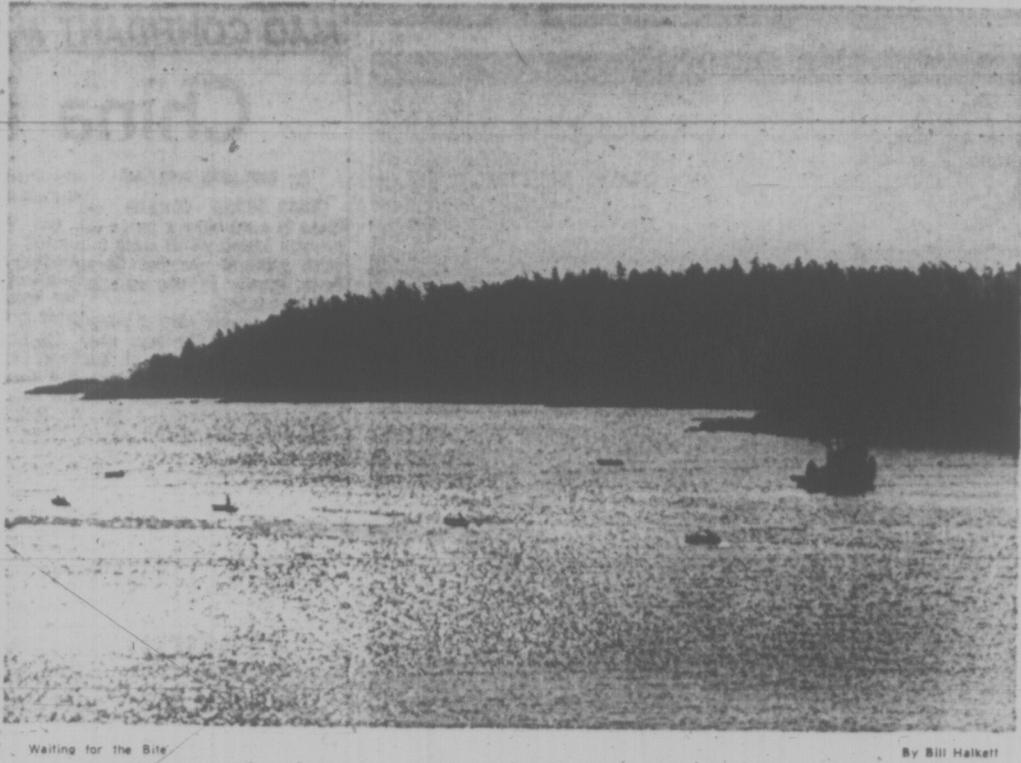

As Mr. Lenfest explains the situation, a limited number of permits is granted to hunt deer in the region and any that are bagged must be dressed out and turned over to the Salvation Army, which uses the meat to feed its less fortunate patrons. This seems to be an arrangement which requires only a little encouragement to keep the deer population down to manageable size.

Certainly it would appear more attractive than widespread hunting to residents of the area, for whom present restrictions no doubt have been fashioned. The peninsula, in spite of sections where hikers occasionally lose themselves, is still a relatively limited tract of land. Too many hunters in it would be far worse than too few to keep the deer down.

Waiting for an Invitation

REPORTS INDICATE THAT Japan was at first shocked and stunned by the dramatic change in U.S. policy towards China. It was said that Prime Minister Sato would be ignored by Peking and that there might be a growing warmth between Taiwan and Japan as a reaction to the Sino-American rapprochement. Recent news would indicate, however, that Mr. Sato has no intention of being outmaneuvered by Peking and Washington; he has said that he is willing to go to the Chinese capital whenever he decides conditions permit.

A visit to China by Mr. Sato would be another step towards greater independence from United States policy and, perhaps, a move towards the day when Japan might resume an independent military stance in the Far East. The increasing industrial strength of the island empire is sure to complicate world politics. We are, for better or worse, returning to an older state of affairs when, to use the words of a British diplomat: "Things are getting back to a wholesome state again; every nation for itself and God for us all."

An Ontario Blueprint for Autocracy

WHEN the executive branch of government controls the legislative branch, which is the essential feature of so-called "irresponsible" government, the possibilities and probabilities of irresponsibility are well-nigh inexhaustible. This is the great weakness and danger of the parliamentary system as developed in Britain and inherited by this country and there appears to be no solution for it.

In the last analysis, of course, the voters can throw out a government which has gone too far into autocracy. But this requires that the voters be vividly aware that a condition of autocracy exists, and such an awareness if history is any guide can only be produced by extreme and dramatic circumstances, such as the Commons "pipeline debate" of 1956. With a little bit of luck and subtlety, governments can be as autocratic as they please and the voters either never hear of it or don't care if they do.

Perhaps this is because the methods which a government can use to achieve autocracy are too subtle and too far removed from the voters for easy understanding. Usually they involve the manipulation and sometimes the violation of the parliamentary rules, a subject which is beyond the ken of most mortal men. Yet the intent and the result are just as oppressive and as undemocratic as if the government had ground its boot on some citizen's neck.

Pressure

Thus the Ontario Legislature in this summer eve of a provincial general election. For three months after taking office last March, the Davis government had virtually nothing of any legislative substance to say to the Legislature. Then in June, just when most people start thinking of vacations and legislators start calculating prorogation dates, the bills came forth from cabinet: some 50 of them, in one two-week period. At the same time, the government declared it would keep the House in session until the Order Paper was cleared of government business.

The temptation to be autocratic under such circumstances is almost irresistible. Early in July the government announced the House would begin its daily sitting in the morning instead of the afternoon; more recently it has set aside the automatic adjournment hour of 10:30 at night, so that debate continues until the government calls a halt.

At this writing, there are still 43 government bills on the Order Paper, including such major items as no-fault automobile insurance, a new Environmental Protection Act, legislation to regulate pits and quarries, controversial amendments to the Elections Act and the Health Services Insurance Act, and a bill to control consumer credit reporting agencies. Each one is worth several days of debate, yet the government is aiming, by forcing the pace, to prorogue in a few days time.

No Chance to Criticize

What is autocratic about this is that it seriously diminishes, if it does not effectively take away, the right and obligation of opposition members to examine and criticize. The opposition parties, like the government, are organized into "shadow cabinets"; certain members are given certain government departments to criticize. When the government throws too many bills at them too quickly, these members simply do not have the time to do their job properly.

Quite literally, under the regime imposed by the government here, many of these opposition critics are expected to be in two or three places at the same time — either in one of the Legislative Committees authorized to sit while the House is sitting, or in the Legislature itself. In addition, of course, they have their routine constituency work to look after as well.

Quite literally, under the regime imposed by the government here, many of these opposition critics are expected to be in two or three places at the same time — either in one of the Legislative Committees authorized to sit while the House is sitting, or in the Legislature itself. In addition, of course, they have their routine constituency work to look after as well.

Spokesmen and ministers of the government; participation by government back-benchers is a rarity (fortunately so, in view of what they have to say when they do participate). The work-load on a government back-bencher is nothing like that on an opposition member.

The right and obligation of the opposition to oppose is perhaps the most misunderstood of parliamentary functions. The popular retort seems to be that the government was elected to govern and opposition members are losers who must not forget their place: "obstructionism" is the charge which is all too readily applied whenever the opposition wants to take a longer look at a government program than the government wants to give it. Since government never seems to pay much attention to what the opposition has to say, and the outcome of the debate is a foregone conclusion anyway, why not "get on with the public business?"

There are two answers to this, both of them, it seems to me, irrefutable. The first is that no one goes into a polling booth at election time knowing for a certainty who is going to form the next government. The member who ends up on the minority side thus has just as great a mandate from his constituents as one on the majority side; if, by careless language, we argue that the government is elected to govern, it is as equally true that the opposition is elected to oppose.

Secondly, it is not true that governments have a closed mind to opposition arguments. They may resist and reject them at the time but they examine them more dispassionately later on and frequently they adopt them in some form. The process may take three or four years but it is remarkable how a persistent opposition critic with a valid point can win out in the end; indeed, most of the legislation brought in by the Ontario government in recent years originated with the opposition parties.

To curtail the opposition's right to oppose, as the Davis government here is now doing, is therefore irresponsible to the point of autocracy. The government, for election purposes, does not want its crash legislation thoroughly examined and it does not want the opposition to be heard. The only way governments can be prevented from doing this sort of thing is to make it impossible under the parliamentary rules, which is no solution at all since it is the government, with its parliamentary majority, which writes the rules.

Labor Pains From the Market Entry

FORMER Prime Minister Harold Wilson and his colleagues in the Labor opposition have been engaging in a sorry spectacle of recrimination, denunciation, a d contradiction. Mr. Wilson's own words and actions of late have raised three great issues: the national interest, party unity and Mr. Wilson's leadership.

The Labor party has been moving slowly into outright opposition to joining the Common Market under a Conservative government. A substantial minority of Labor members of Parliament — perhaps 100 — favor entry. A much smaller number are passionately devoted to the cause that they are prepared to defy the leadership and vote with the government. All the big unions, the party's financial base, and many constituency associations, are opposed to the Market.

The present party warfare began during the special conference called by the party for the open, honest debate. It went well for the Europeans until Mr. Wilson spoke. Fears that the big unions would succeed in forcing a vote prematurely were not realized.

placed to make a dispassionate evaluation of the terms than the passionate Europeans in either party. He was at first opposed, then became a convert, ostensibly after an intellectual evaluation of the choices. Now he says the terms are so poor that he is against once more.

He rests his case on the terms for New Zealand and the sugar-producing countries of the Commonwealth, even though the respective governments have accepted them; and on the initial costs to the British economy of joining, which must be set against the benefits. The costs will begin to be felt in the first year offsetting them. The benefits are impossible to evaluate. The government declines to speculate.

The present party warfare began during the special conference called by the party for the open, honest debate. It went well for the Europeans until Mr. Wilson spoke. Fears that the big unions would succeed in forcing a vote prematurely were not realized.

Unbalanced and Negative

Then Mr. Wilson delivered a totally unbalanced and negative speech, making clear, ahead of schedule, that he will lead the party in opposition to the cause the country and the world thought he supported. Nor did he, admittedly leading a split party, stop at coming down firmly on one side.

He attacked his colleagues: "I reject the assertions, wherever they may come from, that the terms this Conservative government have obtained are the terms the Labor government asked for, would have asked for, would have been bound to accept ... It is irresponsible for anyone who knows the facts to assert otherwise." So much for the open and honest great debate. Undaunted, if saddened, Mr. Jenkins was faced with a personal dilemma. Should he resign as deputy leader or should he put that leadership in jeopardy by rallying the Marketeers, to the displeasure of Mr.

In fairness to Mr. Wilson, he is better placed to make a dispassionate evaluation of the terms than the passionate Europeans in either party. He was at first opposed, then became a convert, ostensibly after an intellectual evaluation of the choices. Now he says the terms are so poor that he is against once more.

Labor Pains From the Market Entry

Wilson and much of the labor movement? He chose the latter.

Two days after the Wilson speech, Mr. Jenkins addressed himself to a meeting of Labor pro-Market MPs. He expressed his personal conviction that "a Labor cabinet would have accepted these terms by a large majority."

He warned desk-thumping members: "If we do not go in, the results will be much worse than if we had never started on the enterprise, much worse for the economy, with a most damaging impact on our weakest sector of industrial investment, much worse for our friends abroad, much worse for the morale and organization of Europe and the West as a whole ... The opportunity if we lose it will be gone for at least a decade and probably for a lifetime."

Mr. Wilson hit back furiously the very next night. In a style reminiscent of John Diefenbaker confronting his party rebels, he said that as long as he was leader "you will take my leadership ... whether it is popular or unpopular."

Unlike Mr. Diefenbaker, he said his tactics should not be construed as a personal wish to remain leader at any cost. This veiled suggestion of resignation was presumably the big stick wielded to whip the recalcitrants into line.

First the leader of the party made life uncomfortable for a minority, then the deputy leader retaliated by making life unhappy for the leader. Both overplayed their hands. History may judge Mr. Wilson more harshly than Mr. Thompson, Mr. Stewart and Mr. Lever, who expressed their convictions in the belief that there is still room for convictions in the Labor party. Mr. Wilson throughout has stressed unity while seeking to maintain it in a curious way.

Change in Stand

His recent emphasis on the non-parliamentary sections of the party is in contrast to his attitude last autumn when he was insisting that the parliamentary party could never be bound by decisions of party conferences.

The issue then was whether a future Labor government would repeal the Conservative Union Reform bill. Mr. Wilson's record then should remind critics who now say he is being inconsistent on Europe. Presumably a leader who one month can say a union reform bill (Labor's in 1969) is essential and scrap it the next can also be for Europe one year and against it the next. There is at least consistency in the inconsistency.

Far more important than Mr. Wilson's personal problems, however, are the effects his decision will have on the country. If the final vote in October went strictly along party lines, without defections, the government might win by about 30 votes. But that is not large enough to carry such a history-making decision.

Perhaps ten hard-core opponents will defect Mr. Heath after all the arm-twisting. He must have some Labor support, which becomes more difficult as Mr. Wilson becomes more vigorously hostile. The Labor Marketeers will look to Mr. Jenkins for leadership. The question will be how many will join him in putting conviction ahead of party. Until then there is no question of party unity.

Opposition Gets Short Shrift at Ottawa

By LINDA GELLER

★ Linda Geller, 23, was a parliamentary intern this year in Ottawa, assisting government backbenchers and opposition members in the House of Commons. She was the gold medal winner in her final year of the honor political science course at University of Toronto in 1970, and was also president of the U of T Liberal Club.

OTTAWA — Last September when I began my internship in the House of Commons, I must admit that the so-called objectivity of my political science background was tinted with a pronounced Liberal attitude.

However, after a 10-month period of working first with a Liberal backbencher and then with members of the New Democratic Party caucus my Liberal blinkers have been removed to reveal a political scientist who is less than pleased with the parliamentary system as she has seen it.

What has disturbed me most of all is what amounts to a conspiracy by the government, the press and the public to tie the opposition hands in their attempt to fulfil the legitimate function dictated to them by the logic of our parliamentary government.

To the casual observer from the House of Commons gallery, the question period that occurs at 2 p.m. Monday to Thursday and 11 a.m. each Friday, must appear somewhat like a futile sparring match. With greater or lesser success the opposition members throw probing questions at the ministerial benches.*

It may become a boring "draw" when Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's interminable questions (all beginning and ending with "ahhh") meet with a shrug from the Prime Minister. Or electricity may fly as when John Diefenbaker, with eyes flashing and jowls shaking across the aisle, hurls forth a biting mix of sarcasm, invective and humor.

If the visitor misses the question period and arrives during the afternoon debates he may find, to his dismay, a score of members reading newspapers or dozing and one member in the ludicrous position of delivering a passionate address.

One little lady sitting next to me during a dull procedural debate said, exasperatedly: "This is what I pay my taxes for!"

Yet, the pomp and show and the debating match are only superficially a "game" because they belie a very important function, that of ensuring that a government, once it is elected, remains responsible to the people.

The Opposition's most onerous and vital task is to "oppose" the government. Once a member occupies a seat in Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition he must accept the responsibility of not only articulating the views of his constituents, but of providing the one official channel for the expression of minority and dissenting viewpoints on government policies in the country.

The press and public can or cannot criticize as they choose, but the Opposition must. Thus the display on the floor of the House of Commons each day is a battle for the Opposition to find out what the government is not doing, or is doing wrong and to pressure them to change their policies.

Few of us would consider this to be a dishonorable task, in principle. However, in practice, we support the encumbrances that are placed on the Opposition that make this such an exceedingly difficult job. *

The first and foremost culprit is the government. To an observer in the gallery during the memorable question period of the "fiddle duddle" earlier this year when Prime Minister Trudeau rudely cut short debate it was little wonder that the Opposition's blood began to boil.

This incident was just the last in a string of more subtle, yet equally high-handed insults that had been thrown at the Opposition since the ascendance of the Trudeau government.

First there was the famous Cause 75-C, introduced into the rules of the House a couple of years ago, which allowed the government unilaterally to stop debate on a motion.

Opposition screams were met by prime ministerial jibes and shrugs and references to the public "who didn't seem to care."

Then there is the ministerial "roster system" which provides for the ministers to be in the House during a couple of question periods only each week, instead of every day as was the practice previously.

Unfortunately, much of the press has been ready to come to the government's aid. The number of times editorials or articles appear stating that the Opposition is obstructing the government again, is very great. *

Perhaps the best example during this session occurred at the invocation of the War Measures Act when the majority of the NDP, in all good conscience, voted against the act because they felt it was not necessary under the circumstances.

Almost immediately, newspapers across the country proclaimed this breaking of "parliamentary unanimity." It took several days or even weeks before the press swallowed some of their pride and indicated that perhaps the NDP had a point in demanding more information.

The government and the press have been working on the public to coax them to join them in their effort of "opposition obstruction."

THE WORKING MAN

U.K. White-Collar Worker Tires of 'Psychic Wage'

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

LONDON — Traditionally most middle-class — or in Canadian terms, white collar — workers have been rewarded in part by the "psychic wage," the social and intellectual involvement and personal satisfactions of their work.

But two British university psychologists reported last week that they now see "a swing away" from the former non-monetary commitment to the job among two middle-class groups: those who no longer see in their work "central life interest," and those who, although still deeply involved in their jobs, are becoming more and more concerned with the relatively low level of their financial rewards.

The second group, in consequence, is beginning to turn to more militant trade unionism, after the fashion of the British working-class manual laborers.

Writing in the intellectual journal New Society, Roger Williams and David Guest, lecturers in occupational psychology at Birkbeck College, University of London, note that they are coming across increasing numbers in both categories.

The total of the first may be still small, they say, but "their importance lies in the fact that, certainly among the middle classes, they seem to have been practically unknown over 10 years ago."

As an example they cite a former high-ranking and successful military officer who left the armed forces in his forties to become a milkman. His earnings are much lower now than they might have been, but since his work ends about 2 p.m. he has the leisure to get in a daily game of golf and to engage intensively in village political and administrative activities. He is a happy and contented man.

The second group, the authors believe, are still involved with their work and take satisfaction from it but are "fed up with having to work" ludicrous hours for a "pitance, largely because they were supposed to be dedicated and involved.

"They willingly accepted the involvement required by their work but do not see why they should sacrifice the rest of their lives to it. Their desire for more time to themselves who once took deep interest in new ideas no longer will put up with the pressure. "It becomes increasingly difficult to maintain full commitment to a profession or skill about which one knows less and less."

• Advances in technology personalize and drain some of the psychic wage that once could be expected. The scope for personal and intellectual involvement previously to be found in many jobs is diminishing, and to keep the fulfillment once obtained in work, employees have to look elsewhere.

"Should they fail to live up to this life style, then their demands of technical control for efficiency and human control for fulfillment in work seem likely to come into conflict. At some point, the human costs of technical 'progress' may have to be more widely debated."

• The lower money

reward, tolerable when the psychic wage was high enough, in many cases is not enough to maintain a "lifestyle" expected of the middle-class workers. And failure to do so may forfeit the respect they once received from society.

"Should they fail to live up to this life style, then their credibility and their own self-respect may break down. This may have already occurred in the case of teachers and clergymen where, over recent years, some of the financial differentials which play an important part in maintaining their life styles have been almost totally eliminated."

"Another factor in society which may both encourage and facilitate a swing away from work is that there is now probably a greater chance than ever before for the middle classes to make a contribution to society in a non-work capacity."

A VIEW FROM ASIA

Small Eastern Nations Find Power Counts With China

By MAXWELL HARVEY

KUALA LUMPUR — As Asians steel themselves for the sight of President Nixon, walking along the Great Wall of China, their overall reaction can be best summed up as utter amazement that the originators of baseball have managed to achieve the most dramatic price of diplomatic switch-hitting since the Second World War.

There has never been any lack of journalistic and diplomatic scenario writers willing to postulate a morning when everyone wakes up to find that Thailand, for example, had bent as quickly to the Chinese wind as they did to the Japanese one in 1941.

Somehow the thought that the Thais — no mean switch-hitters themselves — would find their closest ally was going to Peking first, seemed too ridiculous to be considered. But it has happened that way and it remains to be seen whether the Americans will gain respect for delivering the shock rather than receiving it.

Certainly, those in Japan who have advocated the possession of "self-defence" atomic weaponry must be wondering whether such a possibility would have given prime Minister Sato priority as a Peking tourist. It may well be that the Chinese have inadvertently given impetus to the "revived Japanese militarism" they so constantly attack.

The immediate Tokyo question is whether Sato is likely to get visa number three in the non-Communist list — after Canada's Pierre Trudeau. The Japanese believe that they should have a special relationship with the Chinese runs deep and wide, and definitely infiltrates factions of Sato's ruling Liberal Democratic Party. The U.S. Seventh Fleet, however, can easily leave the Taiwan Strait and its environs, and American military personnel on Formosa can be withdrawn. Japan's greater proportion of factories and trade in its relationship with Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist China cannot be so easily removed.

The best hope for both the Americans and the Japanese is that Formosa's immediate bitterness and sense of betrayal over Nixon's dealing with their "enemys" gives way to more pragmatic and more Chinese calculations. Nixon is scarcely the most radical of presidential possibilities in 1972, and the Nationalists may conclude that a last-ditch stand by the China lobby in the U.S. is less preferable than trying to renew secret contacts with Peking themselves, via Hong Kong. The fact that Nixon is going to China testifies to the availability of Chinese-style pragmatism in Peking itself.

As with Formosa, so with most Asian states, reactions are largest as one would expect. The South Korean and the South Vietnamese leaders wonder how the planned visit will affect their security but have kept their hostility covert, with President Thieu making shrewd references to possible Vietnamese peace.

Few Asian observers share American hopes that the Vietnam war will be over by the time the President reaches the Forbidden City, unless it be on Hanoi's terms. Continued attacks on American imperialism may be of marginal consequence to the United States, but Radio Peking often provides inspiration for guerrillas in southeast Asian jungles whose capacity cannot be sniffed at.

Against this, China's support for West Pakistan against East Pakistan secession and India, her stepped-up aid to Mrs. Bandaranaike's legions of those willing to practise the Thoughts of Mao.

Metis Want More Funds From Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of provincial Metis groups met today in an effort to get more government funds for their work.

A. E. Belcourt of Lac Ste. Anne, Alta., president of the Native Council of Canada, said a main grievance is that a new government formula for federal funding to native organizations has not been followed for non-treaty Indians.

Thus, while the council had expected $1.2 million in federal funds for the educational work of its provincial affiliates in 1971-72, it was to get no more than last year's grant of $41,000 from the state secretary's department.

The recently established native council, with head offices in Ottawa, is a federation of provincial organizations of Metis, persons of mixed Indian and white ancestry.

Mr. Belcourt said treasury board last week decided to follow a proposed formula for granting federal funds to organizations of treaty Indians but not for non-status Indians.

He said council representatives are to talk to Robert Stanbury, minister without portfolio responsible for citizenship, following the closed meeting today. They hope to persuade him to ask the cabinet to reconsider having the formula apply to both native groups.

Mr. Belcourt said that in Canada there now are 500,000 native people, 237,000 of whom are registered Indians under the Indian affairs department. The remainder often live in remote areas, spoke no English and depended on welfare.

The state secretary's department had tried to encourage citizen participation in the democratic process through its grant program.

"But those that need help most are the Metis and non-status Indians because they have never participated," Mr. Belcourt said.

Rocks in Hydrant Help Foil Firemen

DUNCAN — Rocks in a fire hydrant as well as a late alarm contributed to the destruction of the Ethel James residence here Friday night.

Duncan chief Vernon Jones said this morning that he suspects the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion. "Where the fire started there was quite a bit of storage and empty gas tanks and stuff."

There were no occupants in the house that was situated on the Somenos No. 1 Indian reserve on Allenby Road, Duncan. "Apparently the family is in the States right now."

Jones said the fire was well-started before the alarm came in from a neighbor. The problem is that people just don't make a note of the fire emergency number and by the time they finish thumbing through the phone book when there is a fire it is usually well on its way."

Although firemen had the blaze under control in less than half an hour, Jones said

FALLOUT FEAR

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A group of scientists said today a backup safety system widely used in nuclear reactors is likely to fail, resulting in the release of deadly radioactive material.

The report was issued by the Union of Concerned Scientists, a Boston-area coalition of scientists, engineers and other professionals.

The report said the emergency cooling system designed to supply water to the reactor core probably would fail if the primary system was ruptured. The core would melt, burn through the reactor and release radioactive material, the report said.

The scientists said the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission's tests confirm the unreliability of the emergency system but the federal agency continues to license the operation and construction of reactors with that system.

The scientists said the AEC has approved the system after relatively little testing.

Reactors in most U.S. nuclear power plants are cooled by water circulation. The report said 21 are in operation, 56 under construction and 44 in planning and design stages.

The report said the AEC performed a series of emergency cooling tests on a reactor mockup from November, 1970, to March, 1971, and found that the emergency system failed repeatedly. Instead of the emergency coolant rushing to the reactor core, the report said, it flowed out of the rupture in the primary system.

U.S. Senators Campaign For Longer Ship Season

WASHINGTON (CP) — Senators and congressmen from the Great Lakes states have started a campaign to speed up experiments designed to give the lakes a longer winter shipping season.

They are pressing for more money in the current year's budget to expand a port program initiated in recent years to keep ships operating mid-December.

After the normal close of the shipping season, the program along with shipping and see whether the other aspects of a $9.5 million Great Lakes can eventually be three-year study covering shipping — is designed not only to extend the season but also to determine more precisely in advance when shipping is likely to halt for the winter. At present the close of shipping is usually known only a few days in advance.

Presenting their case for a larger budget, the Great Lakes senators said in a joint public statement, "We believe that year-round shipping

Woman 'Mafiosa' May be Banished

PALERMO (AP) — A special court questioned 27 visitors may be exiled without trial.

Today to decide whether she would be banished from Sicily for the first woman ever exiled as a Mafia suspect.

Police Chief Ferdinando Li Donni said the former physical education instructor at the Sacred Heart Religious Institute had contacts with wanted leaders of the Mafia, the Sicilian-based secret society accused of underworld operations.

Police prosecutor Vincenzo Terranova recommended that the court banish her from Mafia-ridden Sicily for five years.

A police source told reporters: "Don't try to make a heroine of her, or a new Joan of Arc. She is a Mafiosa big shot."

Antonietta's lawyer, Mario Lippolito, said the girl is being persecuted because her brother, Calogero Bagarella, and her fiance, Salvatore Tina, are reputed lieutenants of fugitive Mafia boss Luciano Liggio.

"Everyone knows," Lippolito told the court, "that in Sicily women have no part in men's affairs."

The court is expected to decide within 10 days. Under spec-

TWO MAYORS

Airport Gets Backing

DUNCAN — North Cowichan Mayor Gerry Smith and Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife have both come out in support of the proposed Glenora air-port.

The project, which was announced a few years ago and was finally coming to reality in May when land clearing began, has been held up by a group of Glenora residents who say they were not given sufficient notice by the Duncan Airport Society.

The protesters, who feel that the Cassidy airport just south of Nanaimo could serve the whole area, are now attempting to have the society's lease with the Cowichan Valley Regional Board, which is acting as landlord for the crown, revoked.

"There is more need and value in this airport than the average person realizes," Smith stressed. "The present airstrip has proved this when it has been used by forest service, coast guard and many other services."

Smith said the two airstrips that are used in the Cowichan Valley will soon be out of commission.

He said the private strip off Drinkwater Road in North Cowichan is to be subdivided and the Duncan Flying Club's strip will soon have to be vacated because it is situated on a gravel pit which the owners want to develop.

192 BATTLE SWELLS IN STRAITS

Nanaimo Tubber Wins

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bill Rathlef of Nanaimo ran with ruthless calm the five-foot-swells of the Strait of Georgia Sunday to claim the winner's spot in the fifth annual Nanaimo-to-Vancouver bathtub race.

Rathlef was actually the second of 192 bathtubbers across the line but 16-year-old Randy Geiss of Keyport, Wash., was disqualified.

The Geiss tub, running for the U.S. navy torpedo station at Keyport, didn't draw enough water. The regulation minimum is two inches.

Rathlef, 31, running for the Hotel Oceana in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, piloted a glass fibre-molded tub-powered by the maximum permissible six-horsepower outboard engine.

His time of two hours, six minutes was five minutes more than the 1968 record.

Winds were 15 knots out of the northwest as the 32-mile race began.

Second place went to Tom Allen of Port Alberni on Vancouver Island and third was Dan Downer, also of Nanaimo, finished Darlene Dorman, also to Nanaimo, finished fourth.

Race commodore Les Mottishaw won his own trophy just 30 seconds across the line for the first tub to swamp.

Heavy Seas Hamper Skiers

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 30-year-old shipbroker, KIM Gaynor of Vancouver, won the marathon 64-mile water ski race from Vancouver to Nanaimo and return Saturday.

Gaynor was the only one of 3 competitors to complete the race across the strait of Georgia in both directions. In second place was Michael Morin, also of Vancouver, the only entrant, other than Gaynor, to complete the first leg.

His time was three hours and seven minutes.

Some others skiers did make it to Nanaimo, but they arrived aboard coast guard ships or the boats that were towing them in the race.

Gaynor, who apparently believes practice makes perfect, trained for the race Wednesday by making a one-sided crossing to Nanaimo in 60 minutes.

Gaynor said he fell twice on the way to Nanaimo, but stayed upright on the way back, with the wind behind him.

Food Co-Op Planned By Low Income Group

DUNCAN — The newly formed Mid-Island Low Income Group plans to establish a food co-op in early August. Secretary Barbara Rooney of Chemainus said initially an order-of-food, which will include flour, vegetables and meat, will be distributed from depots at individual houses.

The group also plans to establish a co-operative babysitting service and day-care centre.

Mrs. Rooney said the main

Alberni Men Killed in Crash

Two Port Alberni men, Joseph Gille Beaulac and Peter Andrew Lorenzo, were killed Friday night in a two-car head-on collision three miles west of Hope on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Another two-car crash at Penticton Friday claimed the life of Kenneth Anseth McEachern, 20, of Walnut Grove, a small community in the Upper Fraser Valley.

Gordon Emerson Bowes, 56, of Abbotsford died Friday night when his car went out of control and smashed into a ditch near his home.

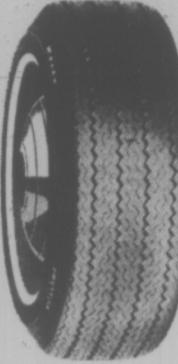

Mrs. I. V. Kaila, 59, of Vancouver was killed Saturday night when she was struck by a car in front of her home.

An unidentified Alberta man died Saturday when the car he was riding in collided with a second automobile three miles west of Hope on the Trans-Canada Highway.

William Jesson, 38, of North Vancouver was killed Sunday when his single-engine plane crashed at delta Air Park south of Vancouver. He was alone when the accident occurred on a landing attempt.

Short Week Approval Given

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia department of labor has approved for the first time a plan to operate on the four-day week.

The provincial Industrial Relations Board has sent letter to Dowco Consultants Ltd. approving the shorter week on a 9½-hour day for its 12 employees, engaged in preparation of structural and mechanical drawings.

Other local firms are on similar systems but none have received permission as required under provincial legislation which limits the working on straight pay to eight hours.

Dowco had run on the shorter week for a year before asking formal approval. The firm remains open on Friday with a skeleton staff of management personnel.

Salaries are paid at straight time for 32 hours and time and a half for 6½ hours.

Air Licence Reinstitated

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has reinstated the licence of a B.C. air carrier.

The licence of Harrison Airways Ltd. of Vancouver has been reinstated following a suspension in July, 1970. Harrison Airways has a licence to operate an irregular specific point commercial air service to Abbotsford and Merritt, B.C.

The company applied for re-instatement of the licence April 28.

Steel Firms Face Uncertain Times

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Despite nearly filled order books, Canadian steel firms face a period of uncertainty for the balance of the year.

After a poor start during the early months of the year, the industry now appears headed for record production and sales.

But there are many unknown factors.

A big one which will directly affect sales prospects is whether the general economy continues strong for the rest of the year.

But the biggest question mark is what will happen in the United States where an Aug. 1 strike deadline hangs over wage talks between management and labor, representing 550,000 workers.

A short strike — such as the one in 1959 which lasted 116 days — could bring extra orders to Canadian producers during the fourth quarter, traditionally a slow one.

Total Canadian steel production during the first five months of 1971 was 5,033,903 tons, down from 5,273,929 tons in the corresponding period of last year.

EXPANDING OUTPUT

Some estimates for the full year place production at more than 13 million tons compared with 12.4 million tons during 1970.

More than 80 per cent of Canada's steel comes from three Ontario producers — Steel Co. of Canada Ltd., Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., and Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. Sydney Steel Corp of Sydney, N.S., operated by the provincial government, also is a large producer.

The industry as a whole is embarked on a period of expansion in production facilities. Expansion programs of the major producers total about $500 million.

These programs should put the industry in a position to meet growing demand, which some spokesmen estimate will total about 18 million tons by 1975 and 24 million tons by 1980.

Steel price increases which went into effect early in July are expected to improve the profit position of the producers, but uncertain factors for the balance of the year make it difficult for analysts to give an overall prediction for the year.

First-quarter profit of the big three companies was down sharply, but second-quarter figures are not yet available. But the second and third quarters historically are the best marketing periods.

First-quarter per-share earnings of the big three: Stelco, 48 cents a share, down from 67 cents a year earlier; Algoma, 20 cents, down from 56 cents; and Dofasco, 44 cents, down from 63 cents.

Air Charter Licenses

OTTAWA (CP) — Licences have been granted to four U.S. air carriers to operate charter flights to points in Ontario, Manitoba, Alberta, British Columbia, and the Yukon Territory.

The Canadian transport commission says it has renewed a licence of Executive Flight Services Inc. of Portland, Ore., to operate flights to centres in Alberta and B.C.

New licences have been issued to Pirsch Airways Inc. of Springfield, Ill.; Ketchikan Air Service Inc. of Ketchikan, Alaska, and Skagway Air Service of Skagway, Alaska.

Bisch Airways will operate to Ontario and Manitoba. Ketchikan and Skagway will send flights to British Columbia and the Yukon Territory.

The commission said the licences were granted in view of the policy of "reasonable reciprocity" in operating charter flights between the U.S. and Canada.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Chrysler

Chrysler Corp. showed a profit of $42.2 million in the first six months compared to a loss of $17.3 million in the first half of 1970.

The company showed a profit of $31.4 million in the second quarter compared to $10.1 million in the same period of 1970, despite a slight drop in sales.

The company applied for a price increase for 1972 models, but how much has not been determined.

The company said Chrysler has for all practical purposes, killed plans to build U.S.-designed and manufactured mini-car.

Shell

Shell Canada Ltd. reports first-half earnings of $29.57 million on 89 cents a share, up from $24.3 million (73 cents) during the corresponding period of 1970.

The company said the periods were not comparable because joint venture partners have been paying all exploration expenses in frontier regions under a June 1970 agreement.

Higher earnings also resulted from increased natural gas sales, new refining facilities which started late in 1970 at Montreal and other market improvements.

Volume of refined product and chemical sales during the first six months averaged slightly higher than in the period last year.

J & L Dofasco

Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., of Pittsburgh, has agreed to sell to Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. its Adams iron ore mine at Kirkland Lake.

The mine produced iron ore pellets for the steel industry from its taconite ore reserves.

Kaiser

Improved second quarter earnings but lower six-month profits are reported by Kaiser Industries Corp.

Revenues of $89 million ($75.75 million) produced earnings of $8.9 million (32 cents a share) in the quarter vs. $6.8 million (24 cents) a year ago.

In the half, with last year's figures restated, the company had $166.75 million ($140.8 million) in revenue to produce a net of $7.68 million (26 cents) against $10.37 million (36 cents).

Westcoast

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. reports a 31 per cent increase in net profit in the first six months of 1971.

The company said net profit in the first half of 1971 was $3.56 million or 53 cents a share, compared with $2.7 million in the first six months of 1970 or 40 cents a share.

The main reason for improvement was unusually cold weather in the second quarter of 1971 throughout the company's gas marketing area.

Croydon

Study is underway to spot diamond drill holes on a copper prospect held by Croydon Mines Ltd. on the Alberni-Ucluelet highway, which the company says is similar to Falconbridge and Utah property near Port Hardy.

IOS Files Injunction Appeal

FREDERICTON (CP)

The appeals division of the New Brunswick Supreme Court will hear an appeal Aug. 4 from the management of Investors Overseas Services Ltd. against an injunction order filed by dissident shareholders.

The case would normally be heard in the September sitting, but legal representatives for management argued for the earlier date because of what they termed the "urgency of the matter."

The dissidents filed an injunction against IOS chairman Robert Vesco and other management, restraining them from carrying out any official actions or duties involved with the company. The injunction was filed in Supreme Court in Saint John before Mr. Justice J. McL. Prescott earlier this month.

IOS management asked for the injunction to be dissolved but Mr. Justice Prescott refused, filing his decision July 19. Reasons for his decisions will be handed down later.

Management then applied for an appeal against Mr. Justice Prescott's decision and went to the appeals court to seek an early hearing date.

The injunction, filed following a stormy annual meeting in Toronto last month, charges a long string of meetings and voting irregularities, including improper rulings by Vesco.

$1 BILLION INVESTMENT PLANNED BY FORD-ASIA

MANILLA (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. has announced preliminary plans for Asian investment of nearly $1 billion by 1980.

Ford Asia-Pacific president William O. Bourke said Ford plans to begin the program with a $100 million stamping plant in the Philippines to produce steel panels for cars and trucks assembled in nations from Korea to Australia.

Overall, Bourke said, Ford expects to invest $900 million in the next nine years in a series of projects including plants in South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand, Indonesia and the Philippines.

The Southeast Asian plants will produce component parts for an entirely Asian-built car to be assembled in co-operating countries. Ford calls it a "complementation scheme."

Grid Campaign Opens Tuesday

Times News Services

The Canadian Football League season opens on two fronts Tuesday night, and clubs continue to pare rosters in an effort to get down to the legal limit.

Tuesday's curtain-lifters will have Saskatchewan visit the B.C. Lions at Empire Stadium while Edmonton Eskimos are at Ottawa.

Coach Dave Skrien of Saskatchewan has cut defensive end Gary Kerl and tackle Jim Duke, both imports, from the Western Football Conference clubs line-up.

Skrien has reduced his roster to 34 players, leaving one more import and another Canadian to be cut before next week's deadline.

The Roughriders also announced that defensive halfback Homer Cavite has been sold outright to Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

EDMONTON — Coach Ray Jauch cut offensive tackle Ross Gwynn, leaving Eskimos' import list at the regulation 14 while 19 Canadians were left in camp, one over the limit.

Don Trull has been named Eskimos' starting quarterback.

Elsewhere and otherwise in president of Kickers Offenbach, he was barred for life from holding further offices with his club or other federation teams.

Suspensions of two years and one year were requested against three other Offenbach team officials, who allegedly asked players to influence crucial matches.

Accused of violations of the federation's rules against "unsportsmanlike conduct" are players Manfred Mangitz of Cologne, Bernd Patske and Tasso Wild of Hertha BSC Berlin.

The commission also asked that Horst Gregorio Cannellas,

Holland's Tom Okker, combining a strong backcourt game with devastating services, defeated South African Cliff Drysdale 3-6, 6-4, 6-1 Sunday at Louisville, Ky., to win the Canadian open singles championship and a $10,000 prize in the Pro-Tennis Classic. Rain forced post-

Colts' Payroll NFL's Biggest

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A survey of player salaries in the National Football League disclosed that of 26 NFL teams, the Super Bowl champion Baltimore Colts paid their players the highest salaries last year, while Cincinnati Bengals paid the lowest.

The Philadelphia Inquirer, in Saturday's editions, reported receiving the findings of the survey from Philadelphia Eagles defensive back Ron Medved, the team's player representative.

The survey of last year's salaries was taken by the National Football League Players' Association; the Inquirer said.

The survey, the paper said, showed that the mean salary of Baltimore players who responded to the poll was $31,300 while Cincinnati paid a mean salary of $18,600.

The survey also listed mean salaries by position. They were: quarterbacks $39,800, receivers $26,000, running backs $27,400, defensive linemen $25,000, offensive linemen $23,000, defensive backs $23,300, linebackers $24,500 and specialists, $19,600.

MacKay Helps Spartans to Draw

Vancouver Spartans came up with one of their scrappiest games of the season Saturday night and collected a 2-2 draw with Victoria Royals in a Western Canada Soccer League match at Royal Athletic Park.

Spartans, without the services of several players who have returned to Britain and professional soccer, made eight lineup changes during the evening and still managed to show 535 fans that this match was not to be another shutout for Royals.

Ike MacKay of Victoria scored the first goal of the season by Vancouver against Royals with only two minutes gone in the game.

MacKay, an agile centre-forward, collected a pass from winger Joe Korvor and rocked the Royals' defence by slamming it past goalie Barry Sadler on the first direct shot of the match.

And Spartans continued to set the pace the remainder of the first half, keeping the sturdy Royals' defence under almost constant pressure.

Only some great work by player-coach Brian Hughes, who with the help of Ron Thompson engaged MacKay in a tactical battle, and Sadler, who made several saves with the sun in his eyes, kept Spartans from taking a large lead by half-time.

Young George Hyne snapped up a pass from veteran winger Peter Wilson and weaved through to set up Ash Valdal for the tying goal after nine minutes.

Royals found their legs in the second half and Hughes blasted a direct free kick from 35 yards out past Tony Churkys to give Victoria the lead at the 15-minute mark.

Spartans, however, did not give up easily.

Korvor found Victor Kodelja with a corner kick and the winger booted out a long shot which deflected off the head of a defender and into the top left corner of the net with 10 minutes to go.

Recharged Arnie Shows Old Spark

Palmer Coasts To Easy Triumph

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — A recharged Arnold Palmer, who birdied 23 of 72 holes en route to the $50,000 top prize in the Westchester Golf Classic, said the big thing about his big payday was an over-par hole.

Palmer, who matched his Saturday round of 68 for an 18-under-par 270 total Sunday on the 6,700-yard Westchester Country Club over the 14th green, left it there, chipped 12 feet past the pin and putt for a one-over par-four.

"If there was one big thing that happened," he said, "that was it."

"The one thing I didn't want to do was leave it there."

"But it was a good putt . . . and gave me the rhythm I needed to finish."

He finished five strokes ahead of Gibby Gilbert and Hale Irwin, who collected $23,125 apiece in this richest of pro tournaments.

Irwin was only three strokes back of Palmer at the start of the final round.

Irwin, who started the final round five strokes back, maintained the margin with four birdsies.

Sam Snead, the 59-year-old golfing wonder who has won 84 tournaments but had done no better than tie for 25th so far this year, stormed the course with a 68 Sunday to turn in an 11-under 227 and tie Frank Beard for fourth and $11,000 each.

At 279 were Mason Rudolph, Bobby Nichols and Larry Wood.

PGA champion Jack Nicklaus, three under when he teed off, parred the front nine, then came on strong with five birdies on the back for an eight-under 280.

"There was never one like him before and it's doubtful if there'll ever be another."

Ellis, the quiet 31-year-old former World Boxing Association champ, listens to it all patiently. He was Ali's sparring partner.

In addition to living in Ali's shadow, Ellis feels he's never received the recognition his talent deserves. He sees a victory over Ali as a ticket to another shot at Frazier, who knocked him out Feb. 16, 1970, for the heavyweight championship.

Closed-circuit telecasts will be shown at 200 locations across the United States and in Toronto, Vancouver and Halifax. Satellite will carry the fight to 20 foreign countries. British and Mexican television will cover the fight live. The live gate is expected to be about $300,000.

Al's Pick Up Win With Karpiuk's Arm
One of the prime movers of Al's Home Service of the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League is Terry Karpiuk, and he came through again Saturday to lead his team to another win.
Karpiuk, whose pitching record in the league is 4-2, held leading Greaves Movers to only four hits in a 7-2 win at Royal Athletic Park.
Karpiuk's four wins are half of the cellar-dwelling Al's team's win total.
Ralph Anderson contributed to the victory with three singles in three trips to the plate, scoring each time and knocking in a run. Losing pitcher Derrick Drinkwater allowed five hits.
Doubles Triumph
KITZBUHEL, Austria (AP)—Clark Graebner of New York and Ion Tiriac of Romania won the men's doubles title at the Austrian International Tennis Championships Sunday, defeating Germany's Davis Cup duo, Juergen Fasbender and Hans Jürgen, 6-4, 6-4, 7-6.
Aussies Start 'Em Early
SYDNEY.—Australia (Rédu) — A squad of Australian "Water Babies" is in training for the Olympic Games—of 1984.
Olympic swimming coach Forbes Carlile has opened a pool here for babies from the age of two months, believing that one can't start a swimmer too soon on the path to a gold medal.
His best-known protege to date is 14-year-old Shane Gould, who holds the world 200-metre women's freestyle record and is Australia's chief hope of a swimming gold at the 1972 Munich Olympics.
He says a baby introduced to the pool at two months might be able to swim when a year old, but adds that the process should not be rushed.
At first the infants must get used to the pool and learn to move freely and with co-ordination in the water, thus developing a healthy circulation, muscles and a straight back.
Carlile says this is a tremendous help to a child's health. Whether or not he or she eventually graduates to competitive swimming.
PROMOTES SAFETY
It also promotes water safety, so vital in a country where 90 per cent of the population live within an hour of a beach.
Carlile says a baby's water education should begin at home with his first bath.
The mother should lay her offspring on its back and stomach in a shallow bath, sprinkling water gently all over it.
Then there should be no tantrums when the baby is introduced to the swimming pool, heated to 90 degrees fahrenheit for beginners.

Blue Bags No. 19; Killebrew's 499th
By The Associated Press
Vida Blue, seeking to become the first southpaw pitchers in 40 years to win 30 games in one season, chalked up victory No. 19 for the Oakland Athletics Sunday.
Blue, who has lost only three, yielded only one hit in gaining a 6-1 victory over Detroit in the second game of a doubleheader after the Tigers had taken the opener 7-4.
The starry left-hander, hit by a pitched ball while at bat in the fourth inning, was removed for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. Roland Fingers replaced him and yielded two hits the rest of the way.
NOT SERIOUS
Oakland manager Dick Williams said Blue was not seriously injured and that he intends to start the brilliant young southpaw, as scheduled, when the Athletics play Baltimore Orioles on Thursday.
Elsewhere, Minnesota's Harmon Killebrew ripped his 499th career blast as the Twins stopped Boston Red Sox 6-2. But it was only his 12th this American League season and snapped him out of a month-long homer drought.
The 500-homer plateau has been reached by only nine players in baseball history, the last being Ernie Banks of the National League Chicago Cubs in 1970.
YANKEES TAKE TWO
In Sunday's other AL games, New York Yankees took a double-header from Milwaukee Brewers, 6-2 in 11 innings and 9-6 in 13. Chicago White Sox beat Washington Senators 5-1 and 9-6 in 13, Chicago White Sox beat Cleveland 4-3 in the first game of their twin bill, 2-1 to the Indians in the second.
Fred Norman and Steve Arlin are not comparable as pitchers to former Los Angeles stars Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, but they—and the rest of the San Diego staff—resemble the outstanding Dodger mound corps of the mid-1960s, according to Bob Miller.
Miller, a member of the Dodgers from 1963 to 1967 when Koufax and Drysdale led them to three National League pennants, and now at 32 the dean of the Padres' hurlers, made his comparison after Norma n pitched a five-hitter in the nightcap as San Diego split a National League doubleheader from Pittsburgh's slugging Pirates 2-1 and 2-0 Sunday.
THEY HAVE IT'
"Our pitching amazes me," said the veteran right-hander. It reminds me of what we had when I was with the Dodgers."
"It takes great pitching to hold our team to one run in two games and they have it," said Danny Murtaugh, Pittsburgh manager.
Elsewhere Sunday, San Francisco Giants beat Cincinnati Reds 7-3 before losing 5-2, Atlanta Braves defeated Los Angeles 3-1, Montreal Expos held off St. Louis Cardinals 14-8, New York Mets whipped Houston 10-9.
Boyer Involved In Portland Tiff
LAKE COWICHAN — A 2-0 Trail jump on Lake Cowichan pitchers for seven runs in the second inning to oust the host club from the tourney, winning 8-0. Prince George had previously beaten Lake Cowichan 14-0.
The Campbell River squad had dropped a close 2-1 decision to South Okanagan Saturday when a perfect squeeze bunt scored the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning.
The only winner's bracket game Sunday saw North Vancouver trounce Prince George 14-0. In a loser's bracket game later, Kamloops downed Prince George and eliminated them from the tournament with a 5-2 win.
Police said they were called to a downtown hotel about a fight.
Adlions Topple Alcos To Grab Cricket Lead
Albions defeated Alcos by five wickets Saturday at Beacon Hill Park to take over first place in the Victoria and District Cricket Association.
Alcos batted first and ran up 106 runs, all out. Joe Armstrong scored 33 runs for Alcos while Michael Nation had 26 and Mike Dodd 20, not out.
Alcos rebounded for 110 runs for the loss of five wickets behind the batting mastery of Dick Beal, who scored 42 runs.
Chris Rowe, 27, not out, and Malcolm Shanks, 15, were the other noteworthy Albion batsmen. Don Hughes tumbled six horses.
Do you know why?
One taste will tell you! There's a subtle quality to this sophisticated import which explains its growing popularity.

GREAT YEAR FOR CANADA . . .

. . . AT BISLEY MEET

Farmer Claims Queen's Prize

BISLEY, England (CP) — Canadian marksmen failed to place well in a record-breaking Queen's Prize shoot Saturday but are going home loaded with silverware after two weeks of top performance in other events on the Surrey ranges.

The 50-strong contingent of servicemen, cadets and members of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association accumulated perhaps more awards than any Canadian group in the long history of the Commonwealth meeting, with the armed forces team sparkling particularly.

But in the Queen's — top target rifle event of the tournament — they could do no better than get one man in a four-way tie for 12th place, six points behind winning Mick Stevens, a 43-year-old Oxfordshire farmer.

The 286 of Alan Marion, a Hull, Que., policeman would have been good enough for a win in a normal year — it was just one below the previous record that stood for 33 years until Saturday — but this year's scores were extraordinarily high in almost all events thanks to an improved brand of ammunition provided by the British.

Stevens' 292 out of a possible 300 at five distances beat the previous record by five points and the next four competitors also cracked it. Another half-dozen equalled the long-standing mark.

CONDITIONS POOR

The records fell despite miserable shooting conditions that included alternate sun and downpours of rain plus a gusty cross-wind blowing across the target areas.

The four top Canadians are all members of the DCRA team, while two other Canadian place-makers in the "Queen's Hundred" finalists are cadets from Toronto.

Jim Eastman, a 39-year-old handyman from Glen Sutton, Que., was second among the Canadians with 284 to land in a seven-way tie for 25th.

The other final Canadian scores:

Bill Lightburn, 64, of Mission City, B.C., oldest Canadian shooter, 282; Frank Jeremy, a master warrant officer with the armed forces at Kingston, Ont., 276, and cadets John Spencer and Bob Fowler, with 257 and 256, respectively.

While losing out in the Queen's, the Canadians for consolation were declared winners in two other events Saturday. The DCRA team beat out Zambia for the Dominions Challenge Cup for overseas teams based on aggregates in three earlier shoots. WO Ed Zwolak of Victoria, member of the armed forces team, took the service pistol-tiro event.

In all, the Canadians won a total of 19 individual and team events for Canada's finest showing in the memory of veteran observers here.

The armed forces won the prizewinning inter-unit championship Challenge Cup, top team aggregate event for service rifles and sub-machine-guns, while taking five other major team events.

Mrs. Balzer, 31, from Leipzig, shares the record with Teresa Sunkiewicz of Poland.

BASEBALL REDS SLATE TOPAZ PARK TRYOUT

Cincinnati Reds, the 1970 National League baseball champions, will be holding a tryout camp Aug. 12 at Topaz Park.

The camp, for boys aged 15 or older, is sanctioned by the B.C. Amateur Baseball Association as well as the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball.

Tryouts begin at 9 a.m. and will continue through to 4 without a lunch break. Boys are asked to bring their own shoes, gloves and uniforms although the latter item is not required.

No pre-registration is necessary. The camp will be under the direction of west coast scouting supervisor Reno Debenedetto of California, who will be assisted by Murray Zuk of Souris, Manitoba.

VANCOUVER — Jim McGregor and John Wright of Victoria West won the British Columbia lawn bowling doubles championship Saturday by defeating Colin Fleck and John McMillan of Victoria's Burnside Club.

McGregor and Wright were undefeated in the six-game round-robin tournament.

The Bert Leadbetter rink of Stanley Park took the fours crown with a record of four wins, one draw and one loss. Tied for second at 4-2 were Hugh Renfrew of Victoria and Graham Jarvis of Stanley Park. Dave Brown of Vancouver Terminal was the singles winner.

EAST GERMAN STAR TIES HURDLE MARK EAST BERLIN (Reuter) — Karin Balzer of East Germany equalled her world record for the women's 100-metre hurdles when she clocked 12.7 seconds at a track and field meet here Sunday.

Mrs. Balzer, 31, from Leipzig, shares the record with Teresa Sunkiewicz of Poland.

JUST ORGANIZE

Taking the Yawn Out of Childhood

Word seems to have got about of my absolute mastery of the art of keeping small children amused during the holidays and so, rather than replying endlessly to individual queries and problems, I have decided to put down some general observations, hints, techniques and The Grand Strategy, itself.

These will mainly concern children between the ages of nine and 14 who might be classed as juvenile dilettantes whose ennui quotient and attention-span is challenged only by the long-tailed, ring-necked three-toed sloth.

Such children are distinguished by a tendency to sit around with solemn little faces, poking occasionally at their noses, and saying, "What'll we do now?" Lord love the mournful little tykes, it's time someone came to their rescue.

Only this weekend our old friends from Halifax, the Browns, arrived at the completion of their coast-to-coast tour, petulantly complaining that Mark, who is 9, and Shellah, who is 11, slept the entire way from Peggy's Cove to Cadboro Bay. Mark, it appears, aroused himself sufficiently to look for a moment out of the window at Kamloops, where several derailed propane gas cars of the CNR were exploding, but Shellah was all but totally comatose for 3,500-odd miles except to inform Daddy that she was (a) thirsty, (b) had to go to the bathroom, (c) was about to become car sick, and (d) had to go to the bathroom again.

The senior Browns have not taken too kindly to my suggestion that it is entirely their fault and not the fault of their progeny. I, myself, once kept three daughters awake and amused all the way from Amsterdam to Monaco by the simple device of originating a game called "White Horse." Under the rules of this game the first to see a white horse and to call out "White Horse!" was rewarded with a dime. From Amsterdam to Monaco there were, at that time, roughly 40,000 white horses — or $400 worth under the rules of the game — but, as I will explain later, amusing children requires not merely ingenuity but often a heavy initial capital investment.

My own philosophy is based on the charitable assumption that there are no bored children. There are just non-organizing parents. Many parents, in fact, seem to cling to the notion that children can or should amuse themselves. One often finds parents who simply fail to understand why children, though they may be in possession of several hundred dollars worth of sporting equipment and scientific recreational gear, will often find time so heavy on their hands.

Only the other day a neighbor with two boys quoted a remark attributed to Sam Levinson — "I bought my kids a ball and they asked me for the directions" — and let it be known that he had nothing but contempt for kids — his own — who require programming.

My own success, beyond the wildest dreams of any "Y" camp director, came from a simple, logical analysis of what small children want for amusement.

I soon found that it need not be involved or exotic. In fact there is just one simple rule which I'd perhaps best put right down here at the outset: Children will be entertained by almost anything that is expensive or dangerous. There! Nothing too mysterious about that, is there?

Many dangerous games can be easily contrived by any thoughtful, imaginative parent who really has his child's interest at heart.

I, myself, have had great success in organizing them for an hour or two of High Diving in Shallow Water, Roof-Jumping into Daddy's Vegetable Garden, Climbing the Extension Ladder, Throwing the Axe, Knife (the child who is "it" tries to "tag" or "stab" the others), Fire (first to set the house ablaze is the winner), Swimming Under the Big Raft and others too numerous to mention.

The more dangerous the game, in fact, the less parental control is required and the whole supervision may be left to God.

Beachside activity is particularly suitable and any number of children, boys or girls, will go for long periods playing the modern version of Duck-on-the-Rock (the child who is "it" is "duck" and the other throws rocks at it) or Drifting Out to Sea on a Log while the happy parents relax in peace.

While dangerous games are instantly popular and demand little equipment beyond gasoline, blunt instruments, sharp-edged cutting tools, explosives and matches, the modern child, as we have seen from our studies, is liable to begin yawning after eight to 10 minutes of playing anything.

The alternative, as I mentioned earlier, is to use money. Even old-fashioned, non-organizing parents have to use some money since it is a well-known fact that the modern child feels himself improperly dressed and in a status crisis without "official" equipment for his pastimes. This very weekend I observed one poor little orphan who came down to the beach without a full line of wet suits, flippers and aqua lungs and was drummed off the sands by all the little Jacques Cousteaus gathered there.

BIG money, as I say, can do wonders. I often organize a game called Let's All Get Sick at the Village Store. Each of the players is allowed a dollar (although this is subject to negotiation and conciliation) and will be gone for hours buying confections guaranteed to upset their little stomachs for days.

Another swell game is called Marine Museum, in which the children are sent out at low tide to collect interesting exhibits (nails in boards, razor-sharp oyster shells, poisonous starfish, etc.). Note how their listless little eyes light up, bless their hearts, when you offer 25 cents for each and every suitable item. A hundred dollars or even less is enough to keep them occupied and in high spirits for as long as 20 minutes.

I'd go on, but this very afternoon I am to try out the introduction of a new game of Run Sheep Run. We'll use real sheep, of course, and the winner gets to kill them.

Uvic Board Gets New Head

The board of governors of the University of Victoria has a new chairman and one of its members has been re-appointed, but a second replacement is still forthcoming.

Board member Lloyd McKenzie was elected by other members to serve as chairman and official spokesman for the board.

Gil Auchinleck, a B.C. Tel executive who now lives in Vancouver, was re-appointed to a three-year term on the board and also was elected vice-chairman of the board.

A replacement is still being sought for past chairman Willard Ireland, whose term of office on the board expired July 1. Ireland continues to serve until someone is found to replace him.

Treasure Island Hits the Square

Shiver me timbers! Guard your pieces-of-eight! It's Treasure Island, and in Centennial Square yet!

The kiddies got a treat Saturday afternoon when the Bastion Theatre presented the Stevenson classic free of charge to all who cared to stop and watch.

And judging from the expressions on the faces of the audience, it was a thrilling performance indeed.

Making sure old peg-leg Long John Silver wasn't sneaking up on them are: top left, Michelle deBodt, 6, of 4200 Glanford; top right, 11-year-old Sharon Dhillon of 2424 Wark; left, David Shannon, 6, of 2131 Fair Street; and right, Brad Harris, 12, of 55 Oswego.

Bastion Theatre presents children's theatre every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 1 p.m. in Bastion Square and 3 p.m. in Centennial Square.

An exception is this Saturday, with Treasure Island at 12:30 in Bastion Square and 2:30 at the Mayfair Shopping Plaza.

Potato Growers Undercut

Local farmers will lose at least $30,000 on the early potato crop this year due to competition from rock-bottom priced U.S. potatoes.

Alan Barker, manager of the Island Vegetable Co-Operative Association, said that the figure was a "very conservative" estimate of the loss. Farmers will be averaging $30 less a ton this season as compared to the last two years.

He said that local sales are greatly reduced because of the demand for California potatoes on the market. The potatoes that aren't sold in the U.S. are sent up here to be sold at low prices.

Over 1,100 tons of California potatoes were shipped to a Vancouver wholesaler as of June 28, he said. This is a 50 per cent increase over last year's import.

Federal Minister of Agriculture H. A. Olson was approached twice by the B.C. Coast Vegetable and Marketing Board, and asked to invoke existing legislative tariff regulations. This led to no result, said Barker.

"We're quite capable of handling our own produce," he said. "But we need protection from exceptionally low prices."

He pointed out that U.S. potato farmers spend their money and pay taxes here," said Barker. "California doesn't."

Mainland potato growers may dump three-quarters of their early-season crop because of the low prices, according to Ed Gilmore, manager of the Coast Vegetable and Marketing Board. Under normal conditions the crop would be worth about $500,000 to growers.

He said the potatoes are selling at the lowest prices in 20 years, at 10 pounds for 23 cents.

SCREWDRIVER SUSPECT CAUGHT

City police apprehended a suspect this morning 15 minutes after Deighton's Service Station, 752 Caledonia, was robbed of $21 by a bandit armed with a screwdriver.

Detective Inspector William Andrews said today's robbery at 9:20 a.m. was similar to one Saturday when a person armed with a screwdriver stole about $50 from the proprietor of Ben Hill Sporting Goods Ltd., 1815 Douglas.

Andrews said the suspect would appear in juvenile court later.

Ben Hill was alone in his store about 9:30 a.m. Saturday when he was robbed by a man with a screwdriver. The person had looked around the store about 10 minutes, police said, before approaching Hill who had gone to answer the phone.

The $21 taken today was recovered, Andrews said.

Canoe to Hawaii Starts Round Two

If you don't make it the first time — you try again.

George Tocher, 43, the West Vancouver canoe adventurer who was forced to turn back two days out of Victoria en route to Hawaii, is off again.

Tocher left the Delta Marina at Ladner where he's been since July 16 repairing a broken self-steering yane Sunday at 3 p.m.

This time he has no intentions of visiting Victoria where he fouled his gear on the shallow harbor bottom at the Causeway.

Tocher is sailing in a home-made 50-foot dugout canoe in an effort to prove that Pacific Northwest Indians voyaged to the Hawaiian Islands 4,000 years ago.

WOODEN TILLER

He has repaired the self-steering gear and has also exchanged a 17-foot sweep for a more conventional — and less cumbersome — wooden tiller.

His craft, Orenda, is equipped with the barest of radio instruments.

Vancouver developer, J. A. Reid has asked Victoria council for immediate approval in principle of his Wharf Street development project.

Reid's request is contained in a letter to council dated July 8. It will be read before "B" Committee Tuesday.

City hall sources say all aldermen are likely to be present when Reid's letter is read.

A strongly-worded document, the letter asks council for written approval of the Reid Centre. However, Reid indicates he is prepared to "redesign the project to comply with your wishes and with the city planning department's wishes."

Should aldermen be unable to give approval in principle, Reid said he wants "an immediate turndown of the project."

Reid's proposal has been the most controversial city hall issue for the last two years. The idea is at least three years old. Reid's original proposal won favor from an earlier council, but his plans have become the centre of a land-use controversy in the Inner Harbor.

Reid originally intended to build three high-rise towers as part of a residential shopping complex. Ald. Peter Pollen has led opposition to this idea in favor of greater public access among Wharf Street.

Aldermen are likely to find it difficult to deal with Reid's request, because the future of the Ocean Cement Ltd. property next to Reid's land is still under consideration by the federal government.

City manager Bill Hooson said today he does not know which new projects Reid is talking about, nor is he aware of the properties Reid has been offered to him.

Despite the future of Ocean Cement — which will be relocated further up the harbor if the purchasing scheme is approved — Reid has put his request as firmly as possible.

"Of interest to council, perhaps, is the fact that we have recently been offered one of two projects which have been announced in the City of Victoria as new developments. We do hope the City of Victoria supports its new projects and does not acquire a reputation for discouraging investment dollars in its city or of attempting to not honor any of its assurances to investors."

City manager Bill Hooson said today he does not know which new projects Reid is talking about, nor is he aware of the properties Reid has been offered to him.

With a labor dispute expected to close between 75 and 100 lower mainland pubs today, pub-quaffers in Greater Victoria and other Island points will be able to shed crocodile tears in their draft beer.

Only three Island pubs are said to be affected by a strike and lockout at Molson's and Labatt's breweries in Vancouver.

Meanwhile, all other areas in the province are suffering as officials expect about 275 watering holes to run out of draught by the end of the week.

The three are affected because the Liquor Control Board only allows changes of brand twice a year and well ahead of time. In all cases, however, the parlors will remain open selling bottled beer.

The three Island pubs Molson's draught only. Of these, Gorge Hotel on Tillamook expects to run out of draught early this evening while the Kings Hotel on Yates and the Goldstream Inn on the Island Highway expect to dry up early Tuesday afternoon.

These pubs do not get their supplies from Labatt's brewery in Victoria, which was not struck.

A Nudge to Close 'Sex Gap'

WASHINGTON — Federal agencies have been given a gentlewomanly nudge from the top, to close the "sex gap" in programs leading to executive jobs. Failure to comply could cost some agencies their complete autonomy in selecting candidates for training.

Civil Service Commissioner Jayne Baker Spain believes there is a clear imbalance — in favor of men — in the makeup of classes geared to producing tomorrow's government leaders.

Job-Frustrated Man Enters Secretarial School

NEW YORK (UPI) — Once upon a time all the young ladies at one of the country's top secretarial schools wore white gloves and hats but that would look pretty silly on Stephen Koban.

Koban, 22, a slim, dark-haired and rather serious-looking young man, is the first male student at what has been called the Vassar of secretarial schools, Katharine Gibbs. He commutes daily from his parents' home in Peekskill into New York to attend an eight-weeks crash secretarial course designed for college graduates.

There's nothing ideological in Koban's enrolment — the only thing he is protesting is his personal unemployment.

"I'm looking for a chance to get into publishing or advertising," he said in an interview. "When I graduated in June, an English major, I went to half a dozen employment agencies and they closed the door in my face."

Koban, a graduate of the University of Ohio at Athens, said agency interviewers were sympathetic, but told him he had little chance of being hired, even in a menial capacity, without experience and when business was pulling in its belt.

Not every young man would jump from there to enrolment in a previously all-girl school, intent on training for a predominantly feminine occupation.

FANTACIES

"Well, I had already read a newspaper story that Gibbs was ready to enroll men," Koban said. "At the time I let my mind fantasize about it and I dreamed up headlines that read, 'Steve Koban first male graduate from Katie Gibbs.'

"Then I came with a girl friend when she went to Gibbs to apply. We were heading up to a museum after her interview but we never made it. I began thinking about a secretarial job being a way to he likes to talk."

Both parents finally came around and on July 7 Stephen Koban went to school. He insists being the only male member of a class of 38 doesn't even distract him from his studies. He called stenography challenging, and as for typing:

"I had my own style of typing when I came here — what I called the biblical system, seek and ye shall find. Now I'm learning to type without peeking."

SOME GIGGLES

As for the girls' reaction to their male classmate:

"At first there were a few giggles, and I still get apes from anyone who doesn't know about me, but things have settled down. I feel sorry for the teachers — they have to change their speech patterns. They start out, 'now girls . . .' and then they have to add, 'and Mr. Koban.'"

Is he dating his classmates? "Yes and no," he said. "I date one girl — the one I knew before I came here and there's a question of marriage. I'm not dating in general, I've got the one I want."

Koban, a graduate of the

'Inner Journey' Of a Woman

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)

The night Anais Nin decided to publish her diaries, she had a terrible dream: "I dreamt there was a knock at my door and when I answered it, I received mortal radiation."

The 68-year-old "diarist, novelist and psychologist," as the writer labels herself, shared her early fears of being published in an interview with five young members of Boston female liberation who had invited the renowned literary figure to speak at Harvard University. The subject: Women.

Miss Nin's not an activist in the women's liberation movement as it relates to marches, demonstrations, picketing and bra-waving.

"We must do the inner journey first," she said. A woman, in short, should improve her own quality and then work for the common goals of womanhood. Sorry.

She said she felt her own growth was a "private revolution, an assertion of my own beliefs."

FEAR OF JUDGMENT

As for that frightening dream, Miss Nin, who was reared in Paris, said in her still French-accented voice, "It was my fear of judgment, of unmasking, of being exposed and not being loved."

Her three published diaries detail intimate talks in the 1930s and 1940s with writers, revolutionaries and stray astrologists. Writers Henry Miller, Lawrence Durrell and Antonin Artaud were among her famous friends.

She was asked how she survived all three of those egos. "I am an artist, they respected my artistry," she said.

DAMNED BY FAMILY

The diaries also expose her private sessions with her psychoanalyst, Dr. Otto Rank. Later she took over his practice in New York (she has become a U.S. citizen and lives in New York and Los Angeles). But she said her career in psychology ended when "it interfered with my writing."

Her diaries had remained a secret for years. "Otherwise they would not have been written." Her early

I read a piece not long ago that said the greatest impediment to our meeting the challenge of the future may well lie with the accumulated wisdom of the past. And that finding the answers we don't have may prove far simpler than shaking the answers we think we have.

In other words the piece inferred that the old answers have the comfortable feel of an old friend. We have learned them by rote and they pop out automatically at the touch of an intellectual button. And to question an old friend when it rolls out so confidently can be a very difficult thing to do.

To admit that the old answers are wanting and concede oneself to have no answers where formerly there were all the answers is not easily done. But it is something we must be prepared to do if we are sincere in our determination to build a world of tomorrow that is better than the world of today.

The many professions, the many institutions whose ways of doing things and spheres of expertise have long gone unquestioned, are now being questioned. Immovable objects are being confronted by irresistible forces and the result, in every field, is ferment, in every field, and change.

That plan, completed at the end of June, presented seven among them — one organization commonsense suggestions, under the Capital Regional District Board with centralized administrative functions and specialized services, also decentralized direct services in field offices.

Here a difference of opinion has developed with the Family and Children's Service raising its voice in dissent.

No one will deny that FCS has done — and still does — a tremendous work and that its staff and executive personnel have every right to be proud of the results of that work.

At the same time, when it is such a "forward-thinking group, when it has been instrumental in pioneering some outstanding projects in this area, it will surely be reasonable enough to take a second look and to realize that neither its staff, its projects or its place in the social service network, is jeopardized.

Victoria and Vancouver are the only centres left in British Columbia where social service programs are fragmented and run by various levels of agencies.

Certainly these agencies pioneered the service and they have done a splendid work. But the question arises now — will they make a mistake by continuing too long in the same old familiar way?

Mushrooming services and spiralling costs eventually will produce the answer. But is it sensible to wait? Especially when full co-operation now and a willingness to adjust to new realities could lead to an exciting new concept in the field of social service and a better way of helping people back to a meaningful life.

MISS NUDE WORLD ... a lovely tan

FREELTON, Ont. — Rosemarie Hess, blue-eyed and blonde, stepped graciously forward Sunday night to accept her crown, clad in a simple two-piece outfit — white shoes and a gold bracelet.

Mrs. Hess, 25, a Montreal department-store clerk, was picked from among 17 contestants ranging in age between 16 and 31 to reign as Miss Nude World for 1971.

Displaying a lovely tan from top to toe of her five-foot-three-inch, 35-24-35 frame, Miss Hess said:

"After five minutes, it's no problem. There's nothing more to see after four minutes."

NEVERSINK, N.Y. — State police said a 15-year-old Illinois boy was shot to death here Saturday after he fired a BB gun at a 13-year-old hunting companion, then was killed when the younger boy returned the fire with a .22-calibre rifle.

Police said the dead youth, Kenneth Lawhorn, of Rockford, Ill., was shot once in the head and died three hours later in hospital in nearby Liberty, N.Y.

The 13-year-old, identified only as being from New York City, later was charged with juvenile delinquency with a specification of second-degree manslaughter.

LONDON — Actress Elizabeth Taylor, 39, became a grandmother Sunday.

Beth, 19-year-old wife of Miss Taylor's son Michael Wilding Jr., 18, gave birth to a six-pound two-ounce girl at a clinic in London.

Miss Taylor and husband Richard Burton are cruising in the Mediterranean on their yacht Kalimba.

LONDON — Clara, a hen who laid green eggs, is a money-maker for farmer Roy Smith. Or was.

One egg has been sold for $45 ($108) and Smith expects two to fetch up to $200 ($480) each at a London auction.

"But Clara hasn't laid a green egg for more than a week," complained the worried owner of the bird many experts believe is a throwback to an ancient breed of chicken.

LONDON — Men and women can continue making love into their 90s. They generally don't because they are bored with the same partners or have succumbed too easily to their age, a London physician says.

Dr. Myles Lask, a general practitioner in his 60s, urges doctors to treat the problem of sex and the aged more seriously.

He writes in Pulse, a doctor's newspaper, that figures show the average man stops having regular sexual intercourse at 68 if he is healthy or 58 if a bachelor.

HARRISBURG, Pa. — It wouldn't be wise to go to the nearby Allenberry Resort today and ask for Jim Smith. You might run into too many Jim Smiths.

More than 125 persons named Jim Smith from all over the United States are attending the "second national Jim Smith Fun Festival."

The two-day picnic will include a softball game between two teams composed entirely of Jim Smiths. The Jim Smith Americans will be captained by James A. Smith of Rivertown, Md., and the Jim Smith Keystoners will be headed by James F. Smith of Oil City, Pa.

They got away after the victim's woke up and screamed. Police said about $500 was stolen.

A second break-in into the Herman Mehl residence on South Chemainus Road was reported to police about 1:25 a.m.

Police said thieves entered through the bedroom after breaking the window. Mehl, who said $200 was stolen, was not at home at the time.

The other officer to oversee initial operations will be Capt. O. V. Johnson of Winnipeg.

The centre, responsible for an area of more than 2 million square miles, will have a working force of 10 men of all ranks.

The area covered by the centre is bounded on the south by the international border and extends northward to cover most of the Arctic.

Plans also are progressing to move a transport and rescue squadron from Winnipeg to Edmonton by mid-October. At that time, it's expected its H-21 helicopters and Dakota aircraft will be replaced by four twin-Otters.

Apollo 15's Three Astronauts Are a Study in Contrast

Costliest Mission So Far

The Washington Post

Apollo 15 will cost the United States $445 million, which not only makes this mission the most expensive so far but breaks the record cost of Apollo 14 by $45 million.

One reason for the record cost of Apollo 15 is its record length of 12 days, three on the surface of the moon and six days (including the three on the surface) in lunar orbit. This adds $10 million alone to the operational costs.

Another reason is the four-wheeled electric car called the lunar rover, which is being carried on an Apollo moon landing for the first time and which adds $4 million to mission expenses. Another $1 million is tacked on by a lunar drill and an enlarged laser reflector, both of which are being taken to the moon for the first time.

The biggest costs come from changes made in the Apollo 15 command craft and landing craft, changes to allow the two spacecraft to carry more equipment and to stay aloft longer. These changes were made at a cost of $20 million.

The command craft will also carry an instrument bay tucked into a compartment in meeting may be in the wind. Costs costing an additional $10 million. They include a mapping camera, a panoramic camera, a laser altimeter, and an 84-pound satellite that the crew will leave in moon orbit the day they leave the moon and head back toward earth.

YES Lots of Impala at big Year End Savings.

The biggest Impala ever, now offers the biggest value this year. And look at what you're getting! 121½-inch wheelbase. Power front disc brakes with dual master brake cylinders. Double-panel steel roof. Side-guard door beams. And it's the roomiest car on the road. It's a lot of Impala at a lot of savings!

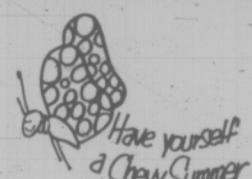

Chevrolet

Putting you first keeps us first.

Year End Savings

YES It's that time of year again and year-end Chevy shoppers are making some very good deals on the 1971 Impala (and on every Chevy).

YES

Super savings on the Super Hugger Camaro.

The four seater sports car. Great for the man with an urge to move, and a small family, too. Rides close to the ground on a neat 108-inch wheelbase. Features a choice of a V8 or 6 cylinder engines, front disc brakes, front coil suspension; Get one while they're hot!

YES

Save big on sporty mid-size Chevelle.

Is this what you're looking for? Maneuvrability in city driving. Comfort on the highway. Dependability wherever you go. That's what you get with Chevelle.

Plus, young styling that keeps it out in front. And, right now it's way out in front in value, too.

Some optional equipment illustrated is optional at extra cost.

Your Chevrolet dealer's saying YES to some very good deals. See him right now.

We're bringing back that good old summertime air, too.

Happily, things are looking up in the battle against air pollution. Because, fortunately, a lot has been done by Chevrolet in the past 10 years to check pollution caused by our cars.

In the early 1960's we began installing emission controls on our engines. And now, every 1971 Chevrolet is equipped to reduce hydrocarbon output by 80% and carbon monoxide emissions by about two-thirds.

You can help, too. Keep your car tuned and those pollution controls checked regularly.

Let that sun shine in.

Buckling seat belt is an idea you can live with.

Tom Northcott, the regulars, Merry-Go-Round and the Dave Shaw orchestra make up tonight's show. Dianne sings Me and Bobby McGee, Fool on the Hill and Ruby Tuesday. Tom sings, Spaceship Races and And God Created Woman.

GUNSMOKE 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (RERUN) "Snap Decision" Marshal Dillon's spirits are crushed when he learns he has killed a prisoner who had been trying to save his life. Depressed over the tragic turn of events, Dillon gives up his badge. But not for long, when he is made to realize he had to act in the line of duty.

THE LUCY SHOW 7 p.m., Channel 6 (RERUN) Mr. Warmth, Don Rickles, guest stars in a wacky episode. Rickles plays an ex-pug who wants to open a flower shop but can't raise the money. So Lucy gets an idea of how to help him. She starts to manage Rickles in a comeback.

IT WAS A VERY GOOD YEAR 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. The title really doesn't apply this time. Surely, under no circumstances, could history consider 1941 a very good year, no matter what preceded the attack at Pearl Harbor so late in the year. The war was tearing Europe and North Africa apart, young men were being drafted, Abbott and Costello were trying to make people laugh in movies and draftees were singing such songs as "For $21 a Day Once a Month," Mel-Torme hosts.

GUNSMOKE 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (RERUN) "Snap Decision" Marshal Dillon's spirits are crushed when he learns he has killed a prisoner who had been trying to save his life. Depressed over the tragic turn of events, Dillon gives up his badge. But not for long, when he is made to realize he had to act in the line of duty.

ABC MONDAY NIGHT MOVIE 9 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun) "Twenty-Four Hours to Kill" (1965) starring Mickey Rooney, Walter Slezak and Lex Barker. Fairly good suspense involving international intrigue with gold smugglers. Rooney is marked for execution by Slezak's smuggling ring after his plane makes an emergency landing in Beirut, it isn't due to take off again for 24 hours.

BLACK JOURNAL 9 p.m., Channel 9. (RERUN) Feature is the much-praised very revealing and candid interview with Sammy Davis Jr., originally aired last March. Davis discussed his past and present images and how today he thinks more of what he does affects and reflects upon his black brothers. His beliefs are reflected in his observations about Angela Davis: "I don't share her political beliefs; I share her blackness," he said, sporting an Angela Davis button. In another segment, the cameras show a black celebrity party after the Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier fight.

THE DORIS DAY SHOW 9:30 p.m., Channel 7 (Rerun) Humorous episode. Doris's magazine is after an interview with a pro football quarterback. Her boss decides to send Doris after him, thinking her good looks will sway the grid hero (Richard Gautier). Everything works fine, until Doris finds herself on the receiving end of the football star's passes, and they're not on the football field, either.

THE DORIS DAY SHOW 9:30 p.m., Channel 7 (Rerun) Doris's magazine is after an interview with a pro football quarterback. Everything works fine, until Doris finds herself on the receiving end of the football star's passes, and they're not on the football field, either.

IT WAS A VERY GOOD YEAR 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. The title really doesn't apply this time. Surely, under no circumstances, could history consider 1941 a very good year, no matter what preceded the attack at Pearl Harbor so late in the year. The war was tearing Europe and North Africa apart, young men were being drafted, Abbott and Costello were trying to make people laugh in movies and draftees were singing such songs as "For $21 a Day Once a Month," Mel-Torme hosts.

GUNSMOKE 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (RERUN) "Snap Decision" Marshal Dillon's spirits are crushed when he learns he has killed a prisoner who had been trying to save his life. Depressed over the tragic turn of events, Dillon gives up his badge. But not for long, when he is made to realize he had to act in the line of duty.

HOME GARDEN

Uncertainty Makes for Fun

By HILDA BEASTALL

The uncertainties of gardening constitute quite a quarter of the interest we have in this form of recreation, art, hobby — call it what you like.

Without the surprise happenings, the whole thing would become routine, soon losing the sparkle of freshness.

So, when we find an early spring blooming shrub with flower buds developing before July is torn from the calendar, we are properly astonished and at once begin to hunt for a reason.

Nature, left to herself, follows laws far more implacable than any laid down by man.

It happens that a great spring interest has been the first flowerings of a number of rhododendron seedlings. R. russatum was charming in 1970 with hundreds of violet blooms in late March on an 18-inch shrub. This spring the flowering was sparse, but new growth commenced before April ended. Now with the cool weeks and dull days of late May, all of June and early July, the new tips matured, set hundreds of round flower buds which could possibly open by September.

Hilda

Time will tell. I may be wrong; the whole lot may abort and there will be no time to produce more buds before winter. This is what I mean by "uncertainties" of nature.

The June flowering enchanthus campanulatus has formed a terminal bud on all new growths, but I hope it doesn't go so far as producing the pendant clusters of exquisite little bells in fall. I need them in June when the tiny crimson tip of each bell is an early summer delight.

With its evergreen foliage enveloping the whole shrub from seven foot top to ground level, laurustinus (viburnum tinus) rarely fails to display as an added attraction all winter long the wide clusters of coral colored flower buds.

They don't open into flowers until about March. Looking at our big shrub now we wonder.

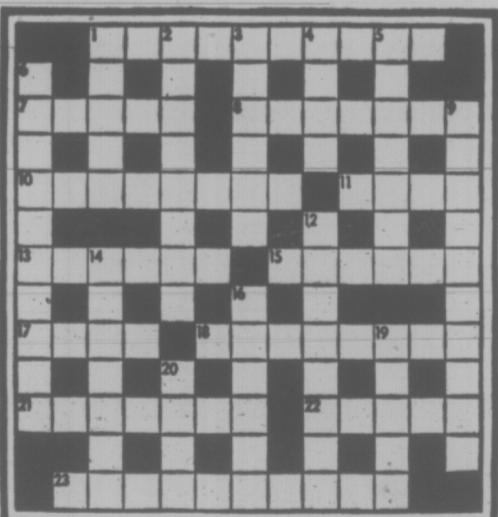

You may find in your own garden, similar surprises. As you think about them you will agree that gardening has uncertainties which the gardener is powerless to change.

This is good for us. It puts us in our proper place as servants of that great mistress, Nature.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

In the political arena or in one's personal life, the slogan, "economy is the watchword," might well be the winning, or practical, one. But at the bridge table its application can frequently prove to be costly. The latter was the case in today's deal, in which a frugal (or, perhaps, unthinking) defender was responsible for his side's needless defeat. Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

THE BIDDING:

North East South West

1 ♠ 1 ♠ 1 ♠ 1 ♠

2 ♠ 2 ♠ 3 ♠ 3 ♠

4 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

East made a mistake at trick one when he failed to overtake his partner's jack of diamond with the queen. Had he done so, the cashing of the diamond ace would have been followed by a third diamond lead, West ruffing. Eventually East would have made a trump trick, to hand declarer a one-trick set.

From East's point of view, he should have recognized that South had at least three diamonds, since West could not have had more than two (if West had a tripleton J-x-x of diamonds, he would have led his third highest, not the jack).

Hence, by overtaking West's jack with his queen, in order to continue playing the diamond suit, East could never be making a losing play. And on those days (such as today) when West's jack was a singleton, it would be the only winning play.

'Amazing Comeback'

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP)—The sea otter, whose fury pelt led to its near-extinction, is making what a biologist says is an "amazing comeback" in the Pacific along California's Big Sur coast.

Once hundreds of thousands of sea otters ranged from Baja, California to Alaska and Japan. They virtually disappeared by 1911, slaughtered for their pelts—which sold for up to $3,800 each.

Paul Wild, 37-year-old associate marine biologist for the California department of fish and game, estimates there now are between 1,200 and 1,500 otters along the Big Sur—and they are steadily increasing in numbers.

After taking the spade queen with his ace, South ruffed the spade jack with dummy's deuce of trumps. He then led the heart four, and finessed his queen successfully. Next came the ace of trumps, after which a third trump lead was made; East winning it with his king.

The best that East could now do was to cash his diamond ace. Actually, if he didn't cash it, South would have discarded his three remaining diamonds on dummy's clubs. Thus all South lost were a heart, and two diamonds.

OPENING LEAD: JACK OF ♦.

The bidding sequence was unusual in that until finally, someone said "pass."

On West's jack-of-diamonds opening lead, the five w's played from dummy, East signaled encouragement by playing his eight-spot, and South followed suit with the deuce. West, not having another diamond to play back, shifted to the queen of spades, South's ace winning. West's shift to the spade queen, instead of the king, was a good play. He wanted East, if the latter possessed the ace, to win the trick and return a diamond.

After taking the spade queen with his ace, South ruffed the spade jack with dummy's deuce of trumps. He then led the heart four, and finessed his queen successfully. Next came the ace of trumps, after which a third trump lead was made; East winning it with his king.

The best that East could now do was to cash his diamond ace. Actually, if he didn't cash it, South would have discarded his three remaining diamonds on dummy's clubs. Thus all South lost were a heart, and two diamonds.

Peter looked at the little photo. "How old is she?" he asked.

"It's no great secret," Charlie chuckled. "If you add seven times its second digit to twice its first you'll get just three times Sally's age."

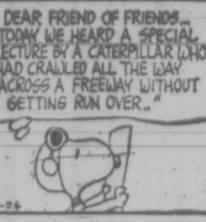

You figure it out.

TANKCAR SMASHUP forced evacuation of two farm families near Lacombe, Alta., today after gas fumes from one of the ruptured cars exploded sending a ball of fire into the air. The 33 wrecked cars were all empty butane or propane carriers being taken to be washed out. Authorities fear further explosions and are testing for other leaks. Nobody was hurt in the smash.

Technical Problem Mars Smooth Start for Apollo

Times News Services

HOUSTON — Apollo 15 ran into technical problems today shortly after the smoothest countdown and moon-ward blastoff in the Apollo series.

Space engineers here are studying the apparent abnormality of a valve in the service propulsion system, but said there is no danger of spontaneous combustion of the fuel.

Shortly after leaving earth orbit at 9:24 (PDT) for the long journey to the moon, Apollo 15's automatic signals and readings from the three-man crew indicated that the valve is "in an unusual position."

The explorers are to conduct man's first driving expedition on the surface, a quest among towering mountains and along the side of a deep canyon.

Col. David R. Scott, Lt.-Col. James B. Irwin, and Maj. Alfred M. Worden, all United States Air Force officers, broke away from the embrace of earth's gravity as a jarring rocket blast shot them out of orbit and sent them winging toward their distant target and one of history's greatest scientific explorations.

For nearly three hours, the astronauts had circled the globe in the command ship Endeavour, checking the craft's hundreds of systems before committing themselves to the three-day outward voyage. Then they re-oriented the third stage of their Saturn V rocket and their speed accelerated to about 24,300 miles an hour from 17,400.

The Saturn V propelled them away from their home planet right on time at 6:34 a.m. as an estimated one million persons watched in the Cape Kennedy area.

"Good job," Scott told the launch crew. "It was a very smooth ride all the way."

ALL STAGES FIRE

All three stages of the Saturn V fired precisely on schedule and propelled the spacemen riding in the command ship Endeavour into earth orbit more than 100 miles high.

Half an hour after leaving earth orbit for the moon, the astronauts separated Endeavour, pivoted around 180 degrees and gingerly poked a harpoon-like docking device into a connecting mechanism landing ship Falcon, cradled atop the third stage.

"We have hard dock," Warden reported.

The docking exercise, relayed live on television by the astronauts, went smoothly, in contrast to the Apollo 14 flight last January, when the astronauts made five unsuccessful attempts before finally linking up on the sixth try. The reason for the problem has never been found, but experts believe a tiny substance might have temporary jammed the apparatus.

MARTIN BORMANN 'ALIVE BUT ILL'

BOSTON (UPI) — Martin Bormann, deputy Führer under Adolf Hitler in Nazi Germany, is alive but in ill health on a ranch in South America, the Boston Globe said today.

Bormann, who fled Allied investigators at the end of the Second World War, lives on the Paraguayan-Argentine border, on a ranch called "Waldau 555." Bormann's SS number, according to a Globe interview with a former Israeli spy.

Zwby Aldouby, a former operative for "Mosad," an Israeli intelligence agency, said Bormann bought a Chilean estate after the war and then moved to Paraguay "where there are 14 colonies of emigres, and some 50,000 Nazis, ex-Nazis and Nazi sympathizers on the Argentine border."

B.C. Ferry Crews Take Strike Vote

Strike ballots were to be distributed today among crews of B.C. Ferries in a dispute over sick leave.

Norman Thorner, business agent for the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees Union, said results are expected by Thursday night or Friday morning.

He discounted an earlier report that a strike is imminent, saying "most likely" a better description.

Thorner said strike action is being considered unless sick leave regulations are changed by ferry management.

CANT GET SICK

He said the regulations, issued April 17, are contrary to general procedures for the civil service. The April regulations limit absenteeism of all kinds, including leaves of absence and days off without pay, in with sick leave.

Two hundred of the union's 1,600 members have been sent letters saying they could be fired if they are absent in the next six months, he said.

"What this means is that they can't get sick any time in the next six months."

He also said the employees are unhappy with management's refusal to acknowledge doctors' letters when employees are absent more than six days.

The only strike in the past against B.C. Ferries occurred in February, 1968, and lasted 13 days. The dispute was mainly over the layoff of 160 employees, job security and lack of meaningful seniority.

Ferries manager Monty Aldous was called twice by the Times this morning and did not respond to messages left.

SASKATCHEWAN GRITS TO NAME NEW LEADER

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Liberal caucus plans to meet tonight following the funeral of leader W. Ross Fletcher, who died Friday.

Liberal spokesman said the caucus would appoint an interim leader, probably deputy leader Dave Steuart, and would make plans for the special session of the legislature which starts Wednesday.

60 Miles Away, Fish Are Dying

TORONTO (CP) — Two University of Toronto zoologists say sulphur dioxide emitted by metal smelters in the Sudbury area is killing lake trout and other fish in the picturesquely La Cloche Mountains on the north shore of Georgian Bay.

Richard J. Beauchamp, associate professor of zoology, and Harold H. Harvey who received his doctorate from the university in 1970, say analysis of rain and snow in the Northern Ontario area indicates acid in several lakes comes from air-borne pollution and not from natural processes. The lakes are 60 miles southwest of the industrial city of Sudbury.

"Once in the atmosphere, some of the molecules of the sulphur dioxide combine with water vapor and fall to the earth as a form of sulphuric acid."

They said one of the lakes most polluted is O.S.A. Lake in Killarney provincial park, named after the Ontario Society of Artists. The area was sketched extensively by several members of The Group of Seven, including Frank Carmichael, A. Y. Jackson, Arthur Lismer and A. J. Casson.

DESTROYS ECOSYSTEM

"During the past few years, lake trout and other fish have disappeared suddenly from several lakes such as Lumsden and O.S.A.," say the two zoologists in an article in The Globe and Mail.

They say the waters of O.S.A. Lake "are so acid as to be lethal to most species of fish."

The acid in the snow enters the lakes in the spring and they say eventually, the concentration of acid exceeds that which some of the organisms in the lake can tolerate, and the ecosystem is destroyed." The two scientists say industry is at fault.

"Industry commonly gets rid of its wastes by building high emission stacks which spread the fallout over a greater area."

"Unfortunately, this tactic has served to carry the acid pollution into an area where the lakes are not capable chemically of neutralizing the pollutant."

R.R. Saddington, assistant to the division manager of the International Nickel Co., the largest base-metal operation in Sudbury, says "the tallest chimney in the world" being built at the company's Copper Cliff plant "is a case of making full use of a proven method of dispersing sulphur dioxide-bearing smelter gas so that it will be rendered harmless."

Writing in the same issue of The Globe and Mail, he says the stack is the best answer to pollution "within the limits of today's technology."

"At the same time, we are continuing a program of intensive research to develop a method of processing our ores that will not involve the generation of sulphur dioxide."

British Columbia became the banana belt of Canada Sunday as thermometers soared, topping long-set records.

The temperature was 82 degrees at the Victoria International Airport, three degrees warmer than the previous record for July 25 set in 1942.

The highest temperature ever recorded in Victoria was 93 degrees in July, 1941.

Warmest place in Canada was Lytton where residents sizzled under 98 degrees.

Warmest spot on the island was Nanaimo where it was a sweltering 89, one degree higher than the previous record set in 1958. Comox reached a peak of 86, two degrees higher than the record set in 1958. The same temperature was enjoyed at Smithers on the mainland, toppling a previous record of 82 set in 1942.

The forecast is for more of the same.

But there may be some respite for those with blistered faces.

Weather officials report a small westerly building up outside the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

It could reduce temperatures by a few degrees—but just a few.

Heart, Lungs Used Without Consent

Times News Services

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — The widow of a 28-year-old black man whose heart and lungs were transplanted by Dr. Christiaan Barnard into a 49-year-old dental technician Sunday, said she was not informed of the transplant and if she had been, would have refused permission for it.

Rosalie Gunya, wife of Jackson Gunya, who reportedly died of injuries received in a fight, said "I would never have given permission for such a thing if I had known."

The transplant recipient, Adrian Herbert, a colored (the official designation is South Africa for mulattoes) Cape Town resident, was today reported to be in satisfactory condition with the new organs functioning.

Jackson Gunya, wife of Jackson Gunya, who reportedly died of injuries received in a fight, said "I would never have given permission for such a thing if I had known."

The transplant recipient, Adrian Herbert, a colored (the official designation is South Africa for mulattoes) Cape Town resident, was today reported to be in satisfactory condition with the new organs functioning.

Jackson Gunya, wife of Jackson Gunya, who reportedly died of injuries received in a fight, said "I would never have given permission for such a thing if I had known."

Informed sources said members of the heart-transplant team saw him there and asked that he be transferred to Groote Schuur Hospital, where they work. He died there later that day.

Mrs. Gunya said she went to Rondebosch Hospital Saturday morning and was told her husband had been transferred to Groote Schuur.

"At Groote Schuur they said they didn't know anything about my husband," Mrs. Gunya said.

"I insisted he was there and after some time they took me to see him. He looked fine to me. He was being given blood, but there was no doctor in attendance. I left the hospital convinced he would be better soon."

The operation was Barnard's first combined heart-lung transplant, and the world's fourth. The previous ones were done in the United States. All the patients died.

The most critical period is the two weeks after the graft when the patient's resistance to infection is low and when the transplanted lungs tend to fill with fluid.

A hospital spokesman said Gunya's relatives could not be located before the operation.

Barnard and his team performed the six-hour operation after doing extensive research and experiments with animals. Herbert, bedridden two years with an incurable lung condition that weakened his heart, underwent extensive tests for four weeks before the surgery.

Nevertheless, Barnard said after the operation:

"We haven't had any experience with this type of operation clinically, and we'll just have to watch the results very closely."

JUST ORGANIZE

Taking the Yawn Out of Childhood

Word seems to have got about of my absolute mastery of the art of keeping small children amused during the holidays and so, rather than replying endlessly to individual queries and problems, I have decided to put down some general observations, hints, techniques and The Grand Strategy, itself.

These will mainly concern children between the ages of nine and 14 who might be classed as juvenile dilettantes whose ennui quotient and attention-span is challenged only by the long-tailed, ring-necked three-toed sloth.

Such children are distinguished by a tendency to sit around with solemn little faces, poking occasionally at their noses, and saying, "What'll we do now?" Lord love the mournful little tykes, it's time someone came to their rescue.

Only this weekend our old friends from Halifax, the Browns, arrived at the completion of their coast-to-coast caravan tour, petulantly complaining that Mark, who is 9, and Shellah, who is 11, slept the entire way from Peggy's Cove to Cadboro Bay. Mark, it appears, aroused himself sufficiently to look for a moment out of the window at Kamloops, where several derailed propane gas cars of the CNR were exploding, but Shellah was all but totally comatose for 3,500-odd miles except to inform Daddy that she was (a) thirsty, (b) had to go to the bathroom, (c) was about to become car sick, and (d) had to go to the bathroom again.

The senior Browns have not taken too kindly to my suggestion that it is entirely their fault and not the fault of their progeny. I, myself, once kept three daughters awake and amused all the way from Amsterdam to Monaco by the simple device or originating a game called "White Horse." Under the rules of this game the first to see a white horse and to call out "White Horse!" was rewarded with a dime. From Amsterdam to Monaco there were, at that time, roughly 40,000 white horses — or $400 worth under the rules of the game — but, as I will explain later, amusing children requires not merely ingenuity but often a heavy initial capital investment.

My own philosophy is based on the charitable assumption that there are no bored children. There are just non-organizing parents. Many parents, in fact, seem to cling to the notion that children can or should amuse themselves, an attitude that is monstrously old-fashioned. One often finds parents who simply fail to understand why children, though they may be in possession of several hundred dollars worth of sporting equipment and scientific recreational gear, will often find time so heavy on their hands.

Only the other day a neighbor with two boys quoted a remark attributed to Sam Levinson — "I bought my kids a ball and they asked me for the directions" — and let it be known that he had nothing but contempt for kids — his own — who require programming.

My own success, beyond the wildest dreams of any "Y" camp director, came from a simple, logical analysis of what small children want for amusement.

I soon found that it need not be involved or exotic. In fact there is just one simple rule which I'd perhaps best put right down here at the outset: Children will be entertained by almost anything that is expensive or dangerous. There! Nothing too mysterious about that, is there?

Many dangerous games can be easily contrived by any thoughtful, imaginative parent who really has his child's interest at heart.

I, myself, have had great success in organizing them for an hour or two of High Diving in Shallow Water, Roof-Jumping into Daddy's Vegetable Garden, Climbing the Extension Ladder, Throwing the Axe, Knife (the child who is "it" tries to "tag" or "stab" the others), Fire (first to set the house ablaze is the winner), Swimming Under the Big Raft and others too numerous to mention.

The more dangerous the game, in fact, the less parental control is required and the whole supervision may be left to God.

Beachside activity is particularly suitable and any number of children, boys or girls, will go for long periods playing the modern version of Duck-on-the-Rock (the child who is "it" tries to "tag" or "stab" the others), Fire (first to set the house ablaze is the winner), Swimming Under the Big Raft and others too numerous to mention.

While dangerous games are instantly popular and demand little equipment beyond gasoline, blunt instruments, sharp-edged cutting tools, explosives and matches, the modern child, as we have seen from our studies, is liable to begin yawning after eight to 10 minutes of playing anything.

The alternative, as I mentioned earlier, is to use money. Even old-fashioned, non-organizing parents have to use some money since it is a well-known fact that the modern child feels himself improperly dressed and in a status crisis without "official" equipment for his pastimes. This very weekend I observed one poor little orphan who came down to the beach without a full line of wet suits, flippers and aqua lungs and was drummed off the sands by all the little Jacques Cousteaus gathered there.

Big money, as I say, can do wonders. I often organize a game called Let's All Get Sick at the Village Store. Each of the players is allowed a dollar (although this is subject to negotiation and conciliation) and will be gone for hours buying confections guaranteed to upset their little stomachs for days.

Another swell game is called Marine Museum, in which the children are sent out at low tide to collect interesting exhibits (nails in boards, razor-sharp oyster shells, poisonous starfish, etc.). Note how their listless little eyes light up, bless their hearts, when you offer 25 cents for each and every suitable item. A hundred dollars or even less is enough to keep them occupied and in high spirits for as long as 20 minutes.

I'd go on, but this very afternoon I am to try out the introduction of a new game of Run-Sheep Run. We'll use real sheep, of course, and the winner gets to kill them.

Treasure Island Hits the Square

Shiver me timbers! Guard your pieces-of-eight! It's Treasure Island, and in Centennial Square yet!

The kiddies got a treat Saturday afternoon when the Bastion Theatre presented the Stevenson classic free of charge to all who cared to stop and watch.

And judging from the expressions on the faces of the audience, it was a thrilling performance indeed.

Making sure old peg-leg Long John Silver wasn't sneaking up on them are: top left, Michelle deBont, 6, of 4200 Glanford; top right, 11-year-old Sharon Dhillon of 2424 Wark; left, David Shannon, 6, of 2151 Fair Street; and right, Brad Harris, 12, of 55 Oswego.

Bastion Theatre presents children's theatre every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 1 p.m. in Bastion Square and 3 p.m. in Centennial Square.

An exception is this Saturday, with Treasure Island at 12:30 in Bastion Square and 2:30 at the Mayfair Shopping Plaza.

SCREWDRIVER SUSPECT CAUGHT

City police apprehended a suspect this morning 15 minutes after Deighton service station, 752 Caledonia, was robbed of $21 by a bandit armed with a screwdriver.

Detective inspector William Andrews said today's robbery at 9:30 a.m. was similar to one Saturday when a youth armed with a screwdriver stole about $50 from the proprietor of Ben Hill Sporting Goods Ltd., 1815 Douglas.

Andrews said the suspect would appear in juvenile court later.

Ben Hill was alone in his store about 9:30 a.m. Saturday when he was robbed by a man with a screwdriver. The youth had looked around the store about 10 minutes, police said, before approaching Hill who had gone to answer the phone.

The $21 taken today was recovered, Andrews said.

He said that local sales are greatly reduced because of the demand for California potatoes on the market. "The potatoes that aren't sold in the U.S. are sent up here to be sold at low prices."

Over 1,100 tons of California potatoes were shipped to a Vancouver wholesaler as of June 28, he said. This is a 50 per cent increase over last year's import.

Federal Minister of Agriculture H. A. Olson was approached twice by the B.C. Coast Vegetable and Marketing Board, and asked to invoke existing legislative tariff regulations. This led to no result, said Barker.

"We're quite capable of handling our own produce," he said. "But we need protection from exceptionally low prices."

He pointed out that U.S. potato farmers spend their money and pay taxes here, said Barker. "California doesn't."

Mainland potato growers may dump three-quarters of their early-season crop because of the low prices, according to Ed Gilmore, manager of the Coast Vegetable and Marketing Board. Under normal conditions the crop would be worth about $500 to growers.

His craft, Orenda, is equipped with the barest of radio instruments.

Hoping to reach the Hawaiian Islands in 45 days

Vancouver developer, J. A. Reid asked Victoria council for immediate approval in principle of his Wharf Street development project.

Reid's request is contained in a letter to council dated July 8. It will be read before "B" Committee Tuesday.

City hall sources say all aldermen are likely to be present when Reid's letter is read.

A strongly-worded document, the letter asks council for written approval of the Reid Centre. However, Reid indicates he is prepared to redesign the project to comply with your wishes and with the city planning department's wishes."

Should aldermen be unable to give approval in principle, Reid said he wants "an immediate turn-down of the project."

Reid's proposal has been the most controversial city hall issue for the last two years. The idea is at least three years old. Reid's original proposal won favor in an earlier council, but his plans have become the centre of a land-use controversy in the Inner Harbor.

Reid originally intended to build three high-rise towers as part of a residential shopping complex. Ald. Peter Pollen has led opposition to this idea in favor of greater public access among Wharf Street.

Aldermen are likely to find it difficult to deal with Reid's request, because the future of the Ocean Cement Ltd. property next to Reid's land is still under consideration by the federal government.

Planning department officials said today formal approval of a federal-provincial-municipal purchasing scheme for Ocean Cement has not yet come from Ottawa.

Despite the future of Ocean Cement which will be relocated further up the harbour if the purchasing scheme is approved — Reid has put his request as firmly as possible.

"Of interest to council, perhaps, is the fact that we have recently been offered one of two projects which have been announced in the City of Victoria as new developments. We do hope the City of Victoria supports its new projects and does not acquire a reputation for discouraging investment dollars in its city or of attempting to not honor any of its assurances to investors."

City manager Bill Hooson said today he does not know which new projects Reid is talking about, nor is he aware of the properties Reid says have been offered to him.

OTHER B.C. POINTS DRYING UP

We're Still Drinking Suds Here

Sometimes it pays to be an Islander.

With a labor dispute expected to close between 75 and 100 lower mainland pubs today, sudsquatters in Greater Victoria and other Island points will be able to shed crocodile tears in their draft beer.

Only three Island beer parlors today are said to be affected by a strike and lockout at Molson's and Labatt's breweries in Vancouver.

Meanwhile, all other areas in the province are suffering as officials expect about 27 watering holes to run out of draft by the end of the week.

And in Vancouver, several Liquor Control Board outlets were limiting customers to two dozen bottles of beer each.

The three Island pubs affected are forced to sell Molson's draft only. Of these, Gorge Hotel on Tillicum expects to run out of draft early this evening while the Kings Hotel on Yates and the Goldstream Inn on the Island Highway expect to dry up early Tuesday afternoon.

These pubs do not get their supplies from Lahatt's brewery in Victoria, which was not struck.

The three are affected because the Liquor Control Board only allows changes of brand twice a year and well ahead of time. In all cases, however, the parlors will remain open selling bottled beer.

On the Island, Lahatt's and Molson's operate under a separate union contract. Negotiations are in progress here with a local of the brewery workers union different from the local involved in the Vancouver strike-lockout.

NO OTHERS KNOWN

Liquor Control Board chairman William Bruce said late last week not all Island parlors are served by Victoria's brewery, but officials at this stage know of no other off-mainland pubs involved in the shortage besides the three mentioned.

The strike began last Monday when 120 workers walked out in a contract dispute at Labatt's plant in New Westminster. Molson's locked out 100 employees at its Vancouver brewery the following day.

James Vernon, president of the B.C. Hotels Association, said Sunday the strike will last "a couple of weeks at the longest." The last brewery workers strike lasted eight weeks in 1965 and this one will probably last until next week at least because no negotiation meetings have been scheduled until that time.

Canadian and American custom officers reported the busiest weekend this year today as thirsty British Columbians flocked to Blaine and Point Roberts, Wash., to escape the drought.

Technical Problem Mars Smooth Start for Apollo

HOUSTON — Apollo 15 ran into technical problems today shortly after the smoothest countdown and moonward blastoff in the Apollo series. Space engineers here are studying the apparent abnormality of a valve in the service-propulsion system, but said there is no danger of spontaneous combustion of the fuel.

Shortly after leaving earth orbit at 9:24 (PDT) for the long journey to the moon, Apollo 15's automatic signals and readings from the three-man crew indicated that the valve is "in an unusual position."

The explorers are to conduct man's first driving expedition on the surface, a quest among towering mountains and along the side of a deep canyon.

All three stages of the Saturn V fired precisely on schedule and propelled the spacemen riding in the command ship Endeavour into earth orbit more than 100 miles high.

Half an hour after leaving earth orbit for the moon, the astronauts separated Endeavour from the craft's hundreds of systems before committing themselves to the three-day outward voyage. Then they re-ignited the third stage of their Saturn V rocket and their speed accelerated to about 24,300 miles an hour from 17,400.

The Saturn V propelled them away from their home planet right on time at 6:34 a.m. as an estimated one million persons watched in the Cape Kennedy area.

"Good job," Scott told the launch crew. "It was a very smooth ride all the way."
